Burleson Takes Over Telegraph And Telephone Lines

General Burleson, acting upon the authority vested in President Wilson by Congress and delegated to him by the Chief Executive, at midnight last Thursday formally took possession of the telephone and the telegraph systems in the United States for government operation during the remaining period of the war. The change from private operation to Federal control and operation was made without ceremony of any kind.

Shortly after midnight Mr. Burleson gave out a formal announcement retaining in the Government all the present employes and officials of the telephone and telegraph companies and calling upon them to remain at their posts. These included the telegraph operators of the Western Union Company, who have been threatening to strike. Mr. Burleson also announced that his first step will be to co-ordinate and unify the telephone and telegraph lines so that the nation will have one national system of wire service. This will be done, he said, with due regard to the owners of the lines and the public service. He also announced that no changes will be made until careful consideration is given to the whole telegraph and telephone situation.

Taxes For 1918 Now Due

County Treasurer R. Mark White and force of clerks are now busy sending out tax notices for 1918. If county taxes are paid on or before October 31st, 1918, a discount of 3% will be allowed, and 2% if paid during November; no discount will be allowed on taxes paid after November 30th. The law provides that both county and State taxes must be paid in order to obtain the discount. State taxes bear interest from October 1st at the rate of 6% per annum, and county taxes bear interest from January 1st, 1919, at the rate of 6% per annum.

Owing to the completed new assessment of real and personal property in the county every account on the tax books is different from what is has been in former years, and there being fractions in the State levy, as is frequently the case, the figuring of the amount to be paid by each taxpayer is a long and tedious task, requiring much night work.

The State tax this year is 36¢ cents on the hundred dollars, and the county rate is $1.10, making $1.46¢ the rate to be paid for both.

Mr. Miles Takes Oath For Second Term

Collector of Internal Revenue Joshua W. Miles last Thursday completed his first term of office and began his second tenure, taking the oath of office before former Senator Lawis M. Milbourne, chief deputy, and his office force.

The Collector's office was banked with floral tributes from his subordinates and was the recipient of many congratulations from his friends. At 3.30 that afternoon Mr. Miles summoned the clerical force, and in a stirring talk thanked them for their loyal support during the past four years, and paid a high tribute to Senator Milbourne. The latter was then called upon for a speech and responded gracefully, expressing his appreciation of support given him by his employes.

Mr. Milbourne, who entered the office with Mr. Miles in 1914, also began his second term last Thursday.

OMAR D. CROTHERS STICKS

Sharp Contest Ahead For First District Nomination

Despite recent reports to the effect that State Senator Omar D. Crothers, of Cecil county, would retire from the fight for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the First District, he seems to be driving straight ahead until the votes are counted.

In last week's issue of the Cecil County News, an Elkton paper friendly to Mr. Crothers, there is an editorial which seems to make it plain that the efforts of Congressman Price's friends to get Mr. Crothers out of the fight have been vain and that a sharp contest is ahead. The editorial follows:

"There has been some 'inspired talk' in a number of our Eastern Shore contemporaries protesting against a Congressional primary this year.

"We will admit that war times militate against politics, but the Administration at Washington happens to be Democratic and should have the advice and co-operation of the strongest members of Congress that our people can name.

"We believe that the most able man on the Eastern Shore for that responsible position is Senator Omar D. Crothers. A man of unusual natural gifts, he has strengthened them by a study of governmental questions. His loyalty to his constituents has never wavered, as his record in three sessions of the Maryland Legislature has demonstrated, and he has always been found on the side of the people in any controversy that has arisen. His vote has always been right on all questions of public welfare, and he has been an able champion of the cause of all moral issues.

"Senator Crothers has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination, but also believing that a war-time campaign should be short has not as yet begun an active canvass. When he does open his campaign we bespeak for him the consideration at the hands of the Democrats of the Eastern Shore to which his fitness for the office entitles him."

Red Men Donate Ambulance To Army

The Improved Order Red Men of Maryland presented a completely equipped ambulance to the medical department of the army at Camp Meade last Sunday afternoon. The exercises began at 3 o'clock. The ambulance, a Garford, cost $3,113.34. This amount was subscribed by the Red Men and Daughters of Pocahontas.

Members of Wa Wa Tribe, No. 121, of Princess Anne, donated $47 towards the fund.

Great Sachem M. E. Tindle called the meeting to order at 3 o'clock. Singing of "America" followed. Lieut. Charles T. Howett delivered the invocation. Dr. James C. Littleton delivered the address of presentation. Lieutenant-Colonel L. A. Kefauver, commanding officer of the base hospital, accepted the ambulance. The "Star-Spangled Banner" was sung and the ceremonies were concluded with a benediction.

A Double Tax On Amusement Tickets

The doubling of the tax on admission to amusements and the tax on club dues in the new revenue bill was decided upon by the House Ways and Means Committee last Tuesday. The present admission tax is 10 per cent. and the tax on club dues is 10 per cent. of the dues in excess of $12 per year.

The committee went on record as in favor of more than doubling the rate on cigars, tobacco and cigarettes. At present $170,000,000 is raised by the tobacco tax. The committee Tuesday decided that a half-billion should come from this source. This would mean nearly trebling the tobacco taxes.

Present rates are 18 cents a pound on tobacco and snuff; $1 to $10 per 1,000 on cigars; $2.05 and $4.80 per 1,000 on cigarettes and a half a cent to 2 cents a package on cigarette papers.

Governor Harrington was informed last Friday by Acting Attorney General Ogle Marbury that he has the power to authorize the State Superintendent of Education to remove the Washington County School Board because of failure to enforce the vaccination law.

BALTIMORE WINS ON ANNEXATION

Court Of Appeals Unanimously Decides Against The Counties

In an opinion handed down last Tuesday by the Court of Appeals, the annexation act is declared constitutional. This decision reverses those of the Circuit Courts of Baltimore and Anne Arundel counties, which declared the law invalid and finally disposes of the entire question. As there was no dissenting opinion it is taken for granted that all of the members of the court agreed with the conclusion reached.

There was some talk of carrying the case to the Supreme Court, but in view of the sweeping victory gained by the city, lawyers generally believe no further action will be taken. Indeed, some of the attorneys in touch with the situation say it would be useless to continue the fight. But even though an attempt should be made to have the Supreme Court pass on the contention that property rights of nonresidents were violated by the state—and the ablest legal minds in Maryland say there is nothing in this claim—several years must elapse before the case could be decided.

What city extension means to Baltimore:

It will increase the area from 31 to 83 square miles.

It adds to the population more than 100,000 persons, bringing the total above 700,000.

It will enable Baltimore to retain its place among the leading cities of the country.

By adding the great industries on the adjacent water fronts the city becomes one of the largest manufacturing centers in the country.

The sanitary conditions now so unsatisfactory can be remedied by extending the sewerage system and water supply.

Residents of the territory incorporated will be represented in the city government and have a voice in its management.

Better protection will be afforded by an extension of the police and fire systems and better order maintained in the suburbs.

It will give to all a greater, better and a bigger Baltimore and add largely to the wealth of the state.

School Teachers Coming Back

Dr. M. Bates Stephens, state superintendent of public education, said last Thursday that school teachers who resigned last fall to accept government positions and private employment are coming back. He added that there will be far less vacancies in the ranks of teachers throughout the state when the fall term opens than a year ago. One reason for the elementary teachers' return is that their annual salary has been increased by $100. Another reason is that teachers who have left the schools for the cities have found out that, while their compensation in new fields of employment is larger than in schoolrooms, they have found their pocketbook to have less cash at the end of each month. Their expenses in the cities have been twice as large as in the towns and villages. Teachers who lived at home or who paid nominal prices for board elsewhere have learned the real lesson of the high cost of living in the cities.

Dr. Stephens reports plan well under way to inaugurate vocational training in the schools on a larger scale. The foundations were laid last March, when the appropriation by the federal government for this innovation first became available. The sum set aside by the government is $29,000 annually, the same sum to be appropriated by the state government for the same purpose. By a graduated scale this annual appropriation will increase until it reaches $100,000 annually by Congress, with a like sum available by the state. There will thus be available $200,000 annually for vocational training, which is divided into three courses, agriculture, industrial arts, including domestic science and training of teachers.

Marguerite Clark To Wed

Miss Marguerite Clark, motion picture actress, will shortly marry First Lieutenant Palmerton Williams, U. S. Engineer, of New Orleans, La. If the marriage takes place before Lieutenant Williams receives overseas orders the honeymoon will be spent in Washington, where the young officer is at present on duty. No date for the wedding has not been set.

William McCandlish Dead

Mr. William McCandlish died suddenly at his home, the Presbyterian manse, at midnight Sunday, after an illness of several months, in the 72nd year of his age. His remains will be taken to his old home near Chambersburg, Pa., today (Tuesday) for burial. He is survived by his widow and two daughters, Miss Caroline McCandlish and Mrs. William Hartzell.

PRIMARY ELECTION ON SEPT. 9

Republicans And Democrats To Name Candidates

Chairman Tait, of the Republican State Central Committee, and Chairman Wade, of the Democratic State Central Committee, will permit the primary election law to operate this year without any interference by them in fixing the date for the joint primary election of the two parties. Hence the date will be Monday, September 9. The Primary Election Law provides that the primary election shall be held on a date by agreement not earlier than the 8th nor later than the 15th of September and if no agreement is reached for a date between these limits the primary shall be held on the second Monday in September.

Only candidates for Congress in each of the six districts will be nominated by the two leading parties.

Prohibitionists, Socialists and other parties have the privilege of nominating candidates by the partition plan.

Socialist candidates will probably be nominated in all districts except the First, while Prohibitionists will nominate candidates in all districts.

On the Eastern Shore no republican candidate has been agreed upon.

State Treasurer Wm. P. Jackson will return to Maryland on August 9th from Loon Lake, N. Y., where he has been spending the summer with his family and will then discuss with his party friends the availability of several Republicans on the Eastern Shore who have been suggested. It is generally agreed that the candidates will be selected from one of the counties north of the Choptank river. Congressman Jesse D. Price will be supported by the Democratic organization on the Eastern Shore for a renomination. Senator Omar D. Crothers, of Cecil county, is also a candidate.

Two months will elapse between the primary and the general election in November. At the November election only candidates for Congress will be voted for. An amendment to the State Constitution will be submitted, giving absent sailors and soldiers the right to vote, their ballots to be returned to their respective voting places in the State.

Honor For Negro Troops

Thousands of people last Thursday accorded the largest draft contingent to leave Wilmington, Del., the greatest ovation yet given any who have responded to the call to the colors. The draftees, all negroes, and numbering close to 500, entrained for Camp Upton, N. Y., after a monster street parade, headed by Mayor Lawson, officials of the draft boards and citizens.

The streets over which the drafted men marched were thronged with people, and all fire aparatus in the city was lined up along the route to assist in the noise-making incidental to the send-off. Hundreds of women whose husbands had been called marched beside them to the railroad station. The departure of these men, with about 200 from Kent and Sussex counties, depletes Class 1 in Delaware.

Will Wed At White House

Miss Alice Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Wilson, of Baltimore, and a niece of President Wilson, will be married at the White House, Washington, to Rev. Isaac Stuart McElroy, Jr., of White Sulphur Springs., W. Va., to-morrow (Wednesday) evening, August 7th.

The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Dr. I. S. McElroy, pastor of Presbyterian Church at Columbus, Ga., father of the bridegroom. Only members of the immediate families will be present. Mr. McElroy is pastor of the Presbyterian Church at White Sulphur Springs, where he expects to remain for about 12 months, after which he expects to sail for Japan as a missionary.

Actor Bushman Weds Miss Bayne

In true modern magazine story fashion the Bushman divorce suit, settled Friday, the 26th ulto., was followed Monday of last week by nuptial bells. The popular movie star, released of his marriage bonds of more than 16 years, was married at noon to Miss Beverly Bayne, for six years his leading woman. The ceremony took place in New York, and the stars are spending a month's honeymoon at Bush Manor, Maryland, the Green Spring Valley home of Francis X. Bushman.

The engagement of Miss A. Frances Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Williams, of Salisbury, to Mr. Hooper S. Miles, son of the late Alonzo L. Miles, has been announced. Both are prominently connected with Salisbury social circles.

Hicks' Forecasts For August

A regular storm period is central on the 7th, extending from the 5th to the 10th. From about the 7th to the 10th, probably Thursday and Friday, the 8th and 9th, look for marked barometric depressions, threatening August clouds, with violent thunder gusts. These disturbances will be followed from about the 10th to 12th by rising barometer, west winds and much cooler.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 12th, 13th and 14th. The Moon is in apogee, or farthest from the Earth, on the 11th and at first quarter on the 14th. On the 12th Mars and Moon are in conjunction. We may look, therefore, for a general low barometer and storms of more or less intensity which will touch most parts of the country, as the disturbances of this reactionary period pass from west to east on and touching the 12th, 13th and 14th. Cooling winds from the west will in all probability follow close behind these storms for a day or so.

A regular storm period is central on the 18th, extending from the 16th to the 21st. On the 16th the Moon reaches her extreme southern declination, with Uranus and Sun at opposition on the 19th and Moon in full conjunction with Uranus on the 21st. On the 23rd the Moon crosses the celestial equator at its closest point to the Earth or in perigee. By the middle of the month the Earth's autumnal equinox will be a growing factor in all weather conditions. We will name the 19th, 20th and 21st and dates next to them in this period as a time of probable danger. Western extremes will have falling barometer, rising temperature and threatening cloudiness as early as the 16th or 17th, but storms will organize and proceed eastwaad, growing in violence as they progress. These storms will reach a culminating stage in central or eastern sections on and about the 21st or 22nd.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 23d, 24th and 25th. On the 23rd, the Moon crosses the celestial equator at its closest point to the Earth during the month. The regular reactionary influences at this time will be greatly increased by the presence of Earth's equinox, Mars and Jupiter periods, combined with Moon in perigee and on the equator on the 23d, and having changed to full by the 21st. It is very probable that equatorial storms will continue over from the preceding period with a renewed strength and wider scope. Following this storm period look for a rising barometer, falling temperature between this and the next storm period, beginning the last of the month. Hot, sultry weather will prevail in sections where storm conditions are not on, and we believe many parts will be needing rain during the first half of August.

War Costing $50,000,000 A Day

America's war bill has reached $13,335,877,000. With the expenditures during the first 27 days of July of $1,339,699,000 and estimated expenditures for the whole month of $1,488,500,000, this nation is now paying out approximately $50,000,000 a day, or over $2,000,000 an hour.

While the July bill will run about $24,600,000 under the June total, Treasury officials indicate that the war developments have reached a stage where the cost to the United States will likely remain for some time around $1,500,000,000 a month. June, thus far, has been the high-water month of the war, $1,512,000,000 having been expended during that month.

Some indication of the growth in expenditures may be seen in the fact that in April, 1917, when we entered the war, the month's expenditures amounted to only $289,000,000 so today's compilation shows a steady increase to a point where they are now over 500 per cent. of the first month.

Bumper Crops For Maryland

Bumber crops are promised the Maryland farmers this year by the crop forecasters of the Department of Agriculture. A bulletin given by the Bureau of Crop Estimates declared that the Maryland crops are above normal in many cases, and the State is within the area where the yield will be 101 to 105 per cent. normal. The estimates for yields of various crops for Maryland are as follows:

Corn, 25,892,000 bushels; wheat 10,906,000 bushels; oats, 1,469,000 bushels; barley, 189,000 bushels; tobacco, 21,890,000 pounds; potatoes, 4,489,000 bushels; sweet potatoes, 1,255,000 bushels; rye, 378,000 bushels; hay, 667,000 tons; apples, 2,365,000 bushels; peaches, 681,000 bushels; pears, 446,000 bushels.

Dr. H. A. Barnes and Mr. Frank D. Layfield, members of the Princess Anne Gun Club, attended the Trapshooting Tournament of the Betterton (Md.) Gun Club last Wednesday and Thursday.

Pocomoke Circuit Church Notes

Next Sunday's preaching services: At Williams, 9.30 a. m.; Hollands, 11 a. m.; Emmanuel, 3.30 p. m., and Cokesbury, 8.30 p. m.

The several Sunday schools of Pocomoke Circuit will unite in a big Sunday school picnic to-morrow (Wednesday) the 7th, at Public Landing. The Quinton M. P. Sunday school, and possibly the Oak Grove Baptist school, will unite with the Pocomoke Circuit schools on this occasion.

The Williams Sunday school met on the church grounds Monday afternoon of last week for an important and well-attended rally and picnic. In every way it fulfilled the expectations of pastor and school superintendent, who planned it. The program included many games and athletic contests, ice cream and cake without charge, and, in conclusion, the pastor, Rev. Vandermuelen, for 20 minutes, addressed the school members seated under the great oak beside the church. The pastor's theme was Sunday school work and plans, and the response was euthusiastic. As a result of this gathering the Williams school is wide-awake to its opportunities and it plans larger things.

Headed by Mr. and Mrs. James Griffin and family, Cokesbury residents, but formerly of Saxis Island, a happy picnic party of about 45 persons, mostly of Cokesbury, motored, in eight cars, the 25 miles to Saxis Island last week for a day of fishing, bathing and picnicing. After fishing tackle was prepared and a lawn dinner enjoyed, two large gasoline boats, chartered by the party for the afternoon, took the picnicers out into the deep and fish-abundant waters of Pocomoke sound. The fishermen, and women, were quite successful. In the party were: Mr. and Mrs. James Griffin aad family, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Evans and family and Rev. C. A. Vandermuelen, their guest for the day; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Elon W. Mills and daughter, E. T. Hope, Edeson Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Payne and family, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Cowgar and daughters, Mr. Cowgar, Sr., Miss Annie Cowgar, Fred Hope, Mr. and Mrs. William Porter, Ralph and John Porter, Miss Kate Lyons, Mrs. W. A. Cottman, and children, and Herbert Beauchamp.

Rev. William Vickers, a traveling evangelist, arrived today (Saturday) with his tent, which will be erected on the land of Mr. W. A. Riggin on the road leading from Princess Anne to Whitesburg, just over the Worcester county line. The services commenced this (Saturday) evening and will continue for some time.

Many delegates are expected to attend, and also a number of prominent speakers. Rev. C. C. Derrickson, of Perryhawkin, and Rev. S. J. Good, of Snow Hill, are arranging for the convention.

CROWNING GLORY

By MILDRED WHITE.

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

Constance sat before the glass, studying her own plaintive face. "Why," she asked herself, "had youth passed her by, leaving so few of its pleasures. For surely this silvery shimmering crown upon her head was proof that youth had gone, and she must no longer deceive herself with its possible coming joys."

Thoughtfully she unloosed the heavy coils of hair, letting it fall in a wavy mass about her shoulders, almost, it seemed to have turned white in a night. A few silvery strands which appeared from time to time had not seemed to matter, but now—Constance's dark eyes were brooding and pathos curved her red lips. Always she had been attendant upon a patient invalid in a wheel chair. And while girl companions enjoyed themselves here or there, Constance solaced herself with the thought that faithful service was the least she could give, in gratitude for the care her aunt had bestowed upon her own orphaned childhood. Now Aunt Delia was gone, and after a long sojourn in the outer world, from whch she had been withheld, Constance returned again, with a grateful sense of homecoming to the empty house on the hill.

Constance had arisen early upon this first Sunday of her home-coming, and had gone alone to answer the call of the bell swaying high in the old church steeple. Very conscious was she of the silent nudges and whisperings in her direction.

"Do you see Constance Gail?" she could fancy her old neighbors saying; "her hair has turned white."

Resentfully she glanced at the companions of her girlhood, with their brown or black locks unchanged; yes, youth had been unkind in leaving her so soon. Then, as she sat before her mirror, into the eyes that still were young, came a sudden retrospective smile. After all, there had been a few hours of enchantment, of light-hearted irresponsibility, and though these occasions stood out with startling distinctness, perhaps the one best remembered was that of the olden-time party at Staunstons. She had gone dressed as a Colonial maiden, while a friend had stayed with her aunt for company, and perhaps the memory of this evening was especially pleasurable because of the daring, mysterious cavalier who had claimed her undivided attention.

Seated now before her mirror, the face of Constance flushed between its curtain of silvery hair; the man had kissed her good-night, and she had never forgotten the kiss.

Why should she recall the episode now, awakened to the fact of a youth past and gone? With careless grace she pinned up the masses of her hair and moved toward the door. It was the twilight bell which called to worship. Hatless, through the summer night, Constance followed on down the lane. Back in the old family pew, a sensation of being steadily observed caused her to raise her eyes to the gallery; and there, looking down upon her, as though in glad recognition, was the very same daring face.

Older, of course, was this man in the gallery, with a certain grave distinction, but there could be no mistaking the fine, frank face or the deep eyes with their humorous twinkle Hardly had she stepped out again into the night, when he was at her side.

"I claim remembrance," the man said quickly, "from the long ago. You may have forgotten a certain bold young guest of the Stauntons, who attended their olden-time party, but I have never forgotten my charming companion, whose name I had not even known. You must pardon me for assisting your recollection; we met during the evening of the party upon the veranda, and in a spirit of youthful adventure, preferred to spend the evening without learning each other's identity. At midnight, like Cinderella of the ball, you disappeared, and—" he laughed shortly, "I saw you no more."

Constance, gazing into the man's eyes, smiled. "I remember it all," she said; "but you are mistaken as to the last. Several times upon the street afterward I passed you without recognition. That was the humiliating ending of my adventure."

"Impossible!" the man declared. "Why, I walked the village streets, searching in vain for a golden-haired maid. From the fair texture of your skin, I fancied your hair must be golden. The night of the dance, you may recall, it was powdered white, gloriously white, like some olden-time picture. Beneath it your eyes, with their dark brows and lashes, were beautiful."

The man was walking along now at her side, seeming almost to forget the fact of her real presence, in the delight of her past fancied one. "Through the years that are gone," he went on, "I have kept upon my dressing table, the picture of a white-haired, red-lipped colonial maid, and just because she reminded me of you."

Constance stood still in the center of the path. "So that is why it all came back to you tonight," she said slowly, "because of my white hair."

Her voice broke tremulously. "It is not powdered now," she said; it is whitened by all those years that are past."

And there in the witchery of moonlight, with the fragrance of flowers all about them, the man stood looking down into her face. "You are as I hoped one day to find you," he said, "and your hair is your crowning glory."

"Fighting Ted"

By WALTER JOSEPH DELANEY

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

"In trouble again, Mrs. Reilly?"

"Yes, Miss Effie. Poor lad! It isn't his fault. He comes of the fighting Reillys of County Clare and sure the same ever held their own. It's born in the blood and bred in the bone."

Mrs. Reilly was in tears when she started her mournful statement.

Pretty Effie Mortimer looked pityingly. Just now she had troubles of her own. Her heart was always true to the best instincts of humanity, however, and she tried to console the widow. The latter came regularly to the Mortimer home to do housework. Brisk, bright eyed, full of wit, Ted was held in general good favor, except when he "broke out." The Reillys lived in a fractious community, with broken heads a natural outcome of community feuds. Ted Reilly was "the best man" of his especial crowd, their champion and their pride.

"It was the Doolans who baited Ted as to being second in a wrestling match," narrated Mrs. Reilly. "He challenged them to try him out, but they came at him unfair. Six of them—and he laid about him. Officer Murphy caught Ted, the judge said an example must be made and poor Ted is in the jail for lack of twenty dollars to pay his fine."

"If Ted would only take his present predicament as a lesson," observed Effie, "it might encourage one to give him a new start. Well, well—don't cry, Mrs. Reilly. We will see what can be done for him."

Ted felt as though an angel of mercy had come to his rescue, when he was released from his cell to find Miss Effie in the sheriff's office awaiting his release.

"I have arranged for your fine, Ted," she said in her usual sweet and kindly way. "I hope this will be a lesson to you. Remember now, you are in a way paroled to me and I am responsible for your behavior."

"You—you needn't fear, I'll not disgrace you," muttered Ted, a big lump in his throat, his innate big heartedness sending the quick tears to his eyes, and then she walked with him along the street, disdainful of criticism and he was completely overcome.

"I hope you will curb your fighting propensity, Ted," said Effie. "Look!" and she paused abruptly and pointed to a great placard. It was an appeal to all patriots to volunteer. "Enlist for the war," it read. "Fighting men wanted." "Does that appeal to you, Ted?" she intimated.

He read, and a new light came into his face. It was fairly irradiated with a grand and noble resolve. "I know what you mean," spoke Ted, "Miss Effie, I'll make you proud of me yet."

She believed him and awaited results. They came within the week. She was not surprised when Ted appeared at her home. With positive admiration Effie regarded the tall, manly appearing young fellow, straight as an arrow, proudly arrayed in his suit of khaki.

"I'm to go Monday, Miss Effie," he said. "Can I come and bid you goodby then?"

"Oh, Ted! I shall feel honored to have you."

"I was No. 13 of the township volunteer quota," continued Ted, "and they've put me on the service flag star 13. And it's a lucky number, Miss Effie. It's got to be, for weren't there 18 stars in the old colony flag, and isn't there 13 letters in your own sweet name?"

Monday afternoon Ted again appeared at the Mortimer home. A servant told him that her young mistress was somewhere in the garden. Near to a vine covered pagoda Ted paused at the sound of Effie's voice. She was sobbing out to a girl confidante her wretchedness.

She had foolishly quarreled with her lover, Ralph Barrett, he had gone to the encampment without bidding her good-by and her heart was broken! Ted could not play the eavesdropper and left the spot.

"I'll tell it to Barrett when I see him," resolved Ted, but Barrett was sent abroad first and it was not until they were "over there" that the treasured message was transmitted.

The service flag bore a marked star one morning in March and Effie asked the postmaster what it meant.

"We've got only the barest word," he explained. "Ted Reilly killed. There's a hint that he did some wondrously heroic deed. We expect particulars later."

They came the next day. Ted Reilly, fearless, dare devil that he was, had accepted a scouting commission to find himself cornered in a vast storehouse of the enemy. His discovery meant death as a spy. There was only a moment to act, with fifty foes rushing to overcome him. Ted drew his revolver, fired point blank at a can of explosive and made half a company accompany him into eternity, besides destroying a million dollars' worth of enemy munitions.

"You shall never want a home," Effie told Mrs. Reilly. "Fighting Ted, ah! hero Ted, he was, and all the world will revere his memory."

A little later a letter came that sent a tremor and a thrill through Effie as she recognized the handwriting. It was from Ralph Barrett in far away France, telling of the revelations of Fighting Ted, and asking Effie to forgive and forget and believe that he loved her more than ever.

Building bridges under fire, the greatest ordeal that the army engineers of other campaigns were subjected to, bids fair to go out of fashion. In future a regiment going across a stream will, if a recent invention meets with approval, merely wade into the stream and drift across, meantime utilizing both hands to manipulate his rifle.

The new invention is a sort of glorified "water wings" arrangement and is adapted to the fording of deep streams without the necessity of bridge building. The encircling buoy is blown up by the soldier. It holds him upright in the water with his shoulders and arms clear of the surface. In experiments recently conducted a man made several bull's-eyes on a target 300 yards away while floating across the stream.

POULTRY FACTS

STANDARD BREEDS OF GEESE

Fowls Should Be Selected for Size, Prolificacy and Vitality—Toulouse Is Largest.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In order to obtain best results in raising geese they should be selected for size, prolificacy, and vitality. Six breeds of geese have been admitted to the American standard of perfection, namely Toulouse, Embden, Chinese, African, Wild or Canadian, and Egyptian. In addition to the standard breeds there is the so-called Mongrel goose, which is a hybrid made by crossing one of these varieties, or the common goose, with wild geese. Crosses of the varieties of geese, especially of the Toulouse and Embden, are occasionally made, but without any apparent gain. The Toulouse, Embden, Chinese, and African are easily the most popular breeds of geese in this country, the first two greatly leading the other breeds. All economic breeds of geese are kept primarily for the production of flesh and feathers; and although their eggs are occasionally used for culinary purposes on the farm, there is no demand for them for food purposes in the markets.

Toulouse Gander.

The Toulouse, the largest of the standard breeds of geese, is a good layer, producing from 20 to 35 eggs a year, is docile, grows rapidly, and makes a good market bird. However, its dark pinfeathers make it a slightly less attractive market goose than the Embden.

The Embden, a large white goose, slightly smaller and with somewhat longer legs than the Toulouse, is only a fair layer and is usually less prolific than the Toulouse. This breed has white pin feathers, is a rapid grower, and matures early.

The African, a gray goose with a distinct brown shade, about the size of the Embden, is a good layer and makes a good market goose, although it has the objectionable dark pin feathers. It is a rapid grower and matures early.

There are two standard varieties of Chinese geese, the Brown and the White. Both varieties mature early and are said to be prolific layers and rapid growers, but shy and rather difficult to handle.

The wild goose is bred to some extent in captivity, and the young are sold to hunters to use as decoys. The wild gander is used to cross with either the common or the purebred goose, producing the so-called Mongrel goose. This Mongrel goose is highly prized as a market goose, but is sterile and cannot breed.

The Egyptian goose is a small, brightly colored goose, kept for ornamental purposes and rarely seen in this country. It resembles the wild goose in shape and weighs two pounds less in each class.

INCREASE IN POULTRY URGED

Poor Policy for Novices to Begin on Large Scale—Quite Likely to Lead to Failure.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It should be borne in mind that an increase in poultry production is sought not for this year alone, but for the entire duration of the war. It is not urged that novices without experience engage in poultry keeping on a large scale. That is recognized as a poor policy at any time and is more likely to lead to failure and eventual decrease than to a steady and permanent increase in production. What is urged is that those who are already poultry growers to some extent and possess the information and ability necessary successfully to increase their stock and production should do so.

Beginning With Poultry.

If the beginner has had experience in poultry keeping, it will be all right to purchase eggs and start with setting them. Otherwise he should begin with the fowls and thus gain some knowledge of caring for poultry before attempting to raise chickens.

POULTRY

WATCH FOR LICE AND MITES

Unless Parasites Are Controlled They Have Marked Effect on Number of Eggs Produced.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Poultry raisers should be on the lookout for lice and mites, for they get busier than ever with the coming of warm weather. Unless they are controlled at this season they will have a marked effect on the number of eggs produced by laying hens, and the number of chicks raised. Poultry houses should be thoroughly cleaned, whitewashed, or sprayed with kerosene or kerosene emulsion at this season. The hens should also be provided with a good dust box, and insect powder should be dusted among their feathers.

Mites usually stay in the cracks of the henhouses and under the roosts in the daytime, where they lay their eggs. At night when the fowls go to roost the mites come out of their hiding places, attach themselves to the fowls, and feed by sucking blood from the birds. To get rid of them the houses should be cleaned and sprayed thoroughly, including the nests, the dropping boards, and roosts. The poultry house that is kept clean and has plenty of sunlight and ventilation is usually free from mites. Immediately after cleaning the house should be whitewashed or sprayed. An effective whitewash is made by slaking one-half peck of lime in 20 gallons of water. Add one pound of salt, previously dissolved, and two quarts of crude carbolic acid, or one gallon of stock dip, and apply the mixture with a spray pump or brush. Kerosene, crude oil, or some good preservative manufactured from coal tar, sprayed about the interior of the house, especially in the cracks and crevices, is an effective means of killing mites. If kerosene is used it is necessary to continue to spray every 10 days or two weeks throughout the warm weather. The effect of crude oil or wood preservative is much more lasting.

Inasmuch as lice spend a greater part of their time on the fowls, the most effective treatment is that which is applied directly to the birds. The cleanliness of the house, however, is of equal importance if the lice are to be gotten rid of entirely. The two most practical methods of fighting lice are dusting or using a paste or an ointment. Provide a good dust box containing a mixture of road dust or wood ashes and allow the hens to dust themselves. Dusting the hens by hand is effective and is especially recommended for setting hens and fowls that are very much infested with lice. A good homemade dust or louse powder is made by mixing together one and one-half pints of gasoline and one pint of crude carbolic acid with four quarts of plaster of Paris. Allow it to dry, crush to a powder, and work it well into the feathers by hand.

One of the most effective ointments used to destroy lice is a mixture of equal parts of blue ointment with vaseline or lard. Mix these ingredients thoroughly and apply a small portion (about the size of a pea) to the top of the head, under the wings, and around the vent.

VALUE OF BACK-YARD FLOCK

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Here are some safe figures about what can be expected of a back-yard flock. Each hen in her pullet year should produce ten dozen eggs. The average size of the back-yard flock should be at least ten hens. Thus each flock would produce in a year 100 dozen of eggs, which, at the conservative value of 25 cents a dozen, would be worth $25. But the 100 dozen is more important than the $25.

Old-Fashioned Idea.

The old-fashioned idea that round eggs would hatch pullets, and long or pointed eggs cockerels, is entirely without foundation.

Use Hens for Breeders.

Don't breed from pullets at all if you can use hens instead.

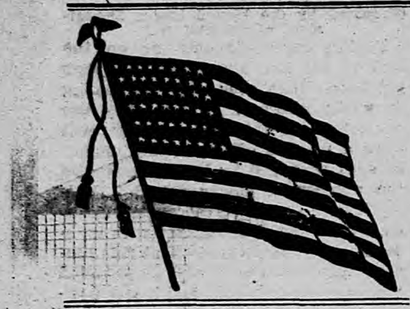
TUESDAY MORNING, AUG. 6, 1918



Most people who can't pay their debts on account of the war, had equally good excuses before the war started.

This is the family reunion season and your relatives look exceedingly good across a well-loaded dinner table.

It is claimed by some that the Kaiser is the greatest man in the world. He is certainly the greatest creator of human misery.

It is denied that advertising bill boards are useless, as they would make splendid material for next winter's fuel shortage.

After kicking because their names are in the paper, many people promptly buy a copy each week to see who is away on vacations.

The Germans say our dyes are no good, but they are good enough to color 68,000,000 yards of khaki cloth with soldiers inside.

The fluid which the boarding house lady euphemistically calls cream, looks to country folks mighty like what they call skimmed milk.

Some of the people who have gone to the summer resorts for the simple life and communion with nature, are now getting up costume parties.

Some people are complaining because their preserve jars aren't full, but the producers will gladly arrange this by making the bottoms thicker.

The fact that a girl sits out with you on the summer hotel piazza until midnight, does not prove she will recognize you when you get in her home town.

It is explained that the editor who remarked that sunrise is the best time to work in the garden, obtained that information from a book on nature study.

The people who sit on the porch and cuss the government for not sending the army over faster are often the same ones who are too indolent to get out in the garden and destroy the Kaiser's friends, the insect pests.

THE CHEERFUL CANNERS

The canning season is upon us. From the back doors there comes the fragrant odor of steaming fruit, and women and girls with flushed but cheerful faces can be seen working over their jars and kettles. The amount of vegetables and fruits being put up by the canners will be something marvelous this year. And we shall need it every bit.

Armies in the field waste untold quantities of food. A large part of the product of our canneries must now go to France. It is up to the home-makers to fill the gap, besides helping to create substitutes for other sources of food supply now depleted.

The spirit shown by many thousands of young girl canners is splendid. The Canning Clubs of girls of high school and grammar age are creating a tremendous food reserve for this time of near famine. The Marylander and Herald offers its sincere tribute of admiration to every girl and every home-maker whose toil is so big a factor in the winning of the war. We could not fight but for the women.

THE BURY-THE-HAMMER CLUB

Mrs. Broadmind's appeal for loyal support of public movements without regard to social lines, led Brother Liberal to get up on his feet at the last meeting and venture a few remarks:

"I think we are too much inclined in our community movements," he said, "to think we can work only with the same group of people we have been working with. If I won't work with Smith because he goes to some different church, or with Jones because he doesn't belong to the same lodge, we are never going to get anything done. We are too much inclined to hammer the people from other groups who start things for the community good.

"We seem to feel that they are doing it to enhance the prestige of their own church or lodge and do not give them the credit for the community spirit that they probably possess just as much as we do. I say when a man from one organization takes hold to start something for the good of Princess Anne we just all ought to get out and holler for him and for it, regardless whether we ever spoke to him before or whether we like him personally or not."

A BUSHEL MEANS A SOLDIER

Do you know that every bushel of wheat now saved means the support of a soldier on the battle line until the next harvest can be gathered, milled and shipped? As no soldier can live without food, every bushel of wheat is the actual equivalent of a fighting unit. The moral is clear. We must supply soldiers. But it is useless to supply the fighters themselves unless we can also supply the wherewithal upon which the soldier lives. The number of men we can put in the field is in direct relation to the number of men we can feed in thefield. Will you support a soldier until the next harvest.

WATCHING THE ADS.

This is a time of year when everyone who suffers from the high cost of living should be reading the newspaper ads. We now come to the time when the merchants begin to fear of having to carry stock over another year. Some merchants will do just that. Rather than spend money advertising a line, they will put it away on their back shelves, where it may or may not suffer from dust and shop wear. They pay insurance on it and borrow money to carry it. The goods will cost them more next summer than this and they may be out of style.

The enterprising merchant does not regard this as a paying proposition. He would rather clean out what he has left at a low price than to carry it over and pay the attendant costs. He announces that fact in the home paper. It is the one chance of the season to get goods for a low cost. The opportunities offered are genuine and based on the regular conditions and exigences of trade.

A great many people watch for just these opportunities. They don't care if they are a bit behind the game, and have to wait until the summer is half over before getting summer goods. It is their way of meeting the high prices of the period and a very good way. Goods bought at a late season sale can usually be had at the prices that prevailed before the war or even lower.

The great majority of our people realize this quite well, and to thrifty people our store ads are as interesting as anything in the paper. Fifteen minutes spent in a careful survey of a newspaper's advertising saves many dollars. The chances there announced should be followed up promptly. A great many other people notice them. The merchandise offered is apt to be snapped up pretty soon after the advertisement comes out.

WHY TOWNS GROW—NO. 3

It is too much to expect that the growth of a town can be obtained by the alertness merely of the heads of its industries. The manufacturer is balked unless his work people thoroughly cooperate with his ambitions. It is a difficult matter to build up a growing industry unless the employes are doing their best to make themselves intelligent in the details of their craft. They must try to turn out a product a little better than any other factory or town creates. An industry in which both employer and employe are doing their best to turn out an article of superior merit can hardly help growing. The town will grow with it.

The towns are also learning now that it is a great help if they can develop the agricultural resources of their own neighborhoods. A prosperous farm country means a growing business center to supply that farm country. Boosting the farmer boosts the place where the farmer trades. As in the case of manufacturing industry a farming section will make faster progress if it can build up a reputation for some staple of superior quality for which there is a growing demand.

If we made a systematic effort for it we could get practically all the country people for many miles around to come in and trade at the stores of Princess Anne. This would mean more and bigger stores. If we could double our volume of retail trade we would then have here a very unusual body of progressive and aggressive business men. They would never be satisfied until they had secured for this town some new productive industries, turning out some distinctive products for which there was a growing demand. This would make certain a very large expansion.

War Lost For Germans

A fact that is appreciated to the full outside of Germany is coming to have acceptance by the masses of the German people themselves, the fact the war has already been lost to Germany. The German drives since the spring have netted the Germans losses to the number of over a million. This is a holocaust of victims offered up to the German war Moloch that cannot be sustained. The Germans know that the full man-power of the nation has been thrown into the vortex, and the Allies have gained the ascendency in manpower as well as in morale and in material. There is, therefore, nothing remaining to the forces of the Kaiser but defeat and recognition of defeat is before them with stern reality.

The sharp turn of the tide has caused the German people the greatest consternation. Yet their leaders cannot and dare not give any acknowledgement to the predicament into which they have brought the nation. With a member of the Reichstag calling for the arrest of Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg for gross deceit of the people in the circumstances of the war's beginning, there are clouds of ominousness in the domestic skies of Germany almost as formidable as the Foch cloud in the war theater.—Baltimore American.

THERE IS A MATERIAL DIFFERENCE.—Some ice receptacles are built to sell and all that can be said of them is the price. In many instances the manufacturer, or seller, is not heard from any more. You have probably noticed that standard merchandise does not get into such hands, and is handled only by reliable merchants. We desire to call your attention to our line of Baldwin Dry-Air Refrigerators, which we have handled for fifteen years, our sales increasing each year. If you want to know about the merit of this line ask the users how their ice bill compares with those using other makes. Our stock is complete. Prices in keeping with quality. Would be glad to show you through the line.

Dr. Robert G. Ellegood, the well-known physician of Delmar, Del., was badly hurt in an accident which occurred in Delmar last week. Dr. Ellegood was driving his car across the railroad tracks and failed to see a tram which was shifting there when his car was struck and crushed to pieces.

Dr. Ellegood suffered several serious injuries, having his head cut, his ribs broken and it is feared some internal injuries. He was taken to the Peninsula General Hospital, Salisbury, and it is believed he will recover.

A Call To Duty

From the battle fields in France there comes an unspoken call that should find an answer in every American's heart. The recent great events in Europe, the successes of American arms on the fields of France should spur every American to greater effort.

Our people at home should not rest on the laurels of our soldiers in France. Every death on the field of honor in the line of duty and for our country's cause should be a call to us for every sacrifice and every exertion to aid the cause for which our soldiers are fighting, for which our soldiers have died.

Increase production, decrease consumption, save, and lend to the Government. Every cent lent to the United States is used to support, strengthen and aid our soldiers in France.

A Bilious Attack

When you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take three of Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. They only cost a quarter.

I tried everything that I heard of to get relief, but not until about a year ago when I saw Chamberlain's Tablets advertised and got a bottle of them did I find the right treatment. Fringed Gentian

By GERTRUDE ROBINSON

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

October, and leaves lying in sodden heaps beneath the birches of Tawny Hill. Knee-deep in the rust-red welter stood Rosemary Damarel. Behind her Tawny creek curled about the stepping stones on which the girl had just crossed. Before her was a mass of sky-blue flowers. Ten minutes before, Rosemary, on her way to the village to mail a letter to her father, had noticed the blue note. Now, her arms full of blue-fringed gentian, she ruefully heard five booming strokes of the town clock. The mail would close in 15 minutes.

Rosemary tilted out on the stepping stones. Midway a gust of wind smote her in the face, tore her coil of gold-bronze hair loose and whipped it in her eyes. A second, and the girl was pitched headlong into the creek. She struggled up, waist-deep in the swirling water. Slowly, fighting the tug of the water, she was sucked toward the deep pool that eddied under the west bank. As the suction overwhelmed her, her voice shrilled to the meadow beyond where a young man was plowing. In a minute something gripped her, gripped her first by the long floating rope of hair, then by an arm, and drew her forth from the sucking maelstrom.

The moment Rosemary felt herself dropped on the pasture land she sat up, and hurriedly coiled her drenched mop of hair in a knot.

"Oh," she complained, "but you nearly pulled it off my head, Lester Fordham!"

The young man shuddered. "It was the only way, Rosemary," he protested. "You know, I can't swim a stroke."

Suddenly remembering her errand, the girl sprang to her feet and handed the man the letter.

"Skurry to the post with this, Lester," she begged. "Father must have it tomorrow."

Five minutes later she vaulted the pasture bars into the road just as a black car came ramping along.

"Rosemary! Rosemary Damarel!" came an astounded voice. In a twinkling she was wrapped in a heavy coat and whisked along at breakneck speed.

Half an hour later Rodney DuQuesne was waiting in a corner of the porch for Rosemary. He was junior member of the law firm in which Rosemary's father was senior member. He was not engaged to Rosemary, though he and her father were agreed in the matter. Rosemary herself had liked him in a friendly fashion ever since her father's city interests brought them together a couple of years before. Nevertheless some instinct had impelled her to ask for the summer to make her decision in. Now the summer was gone, and the man, as well as the girl knew that she was no nearer a knowledge of her own heart. Rodney DuQuesne resolved upon a whirlwind wooing that should bring the girl's feelings to a focus, as he saw her come stepping daintily through the open porch door. A lavender-tinted muslin toned with the bronze-gold of her hair. Her brown eyes were dancing with mischief. She well knew her would-be fiance did not approve of her recent escapade.

After dinner Rosemary went driving with Mr. DuQuesne. She drove her own high-spirited horse, and her frank enjoyment of the exercise revealed to the man that she was quite unconscious of his own poorly concealed delight in her girlish charm. He decided that his only hope of success was to get the girl away from the atmosphere of her home. By the time they returned he had persuaded her to spend a fortnight with his sister in their camp in the Berkshires. But he took scant encouragement from her consent to the trip, for she sprang from the carriage with a cry of delight. On the porch sat a great blue bowl full of wonderful blue flowers, blue even through the dusk of the fall evening.

"My fringed gentian!" she cried. "Lester has fished them out of the creek where I lost them."

Rodney DuQuesne, in spite of his apparent advantage, left with a sense of futility. He realized she cared more for the clump of wild flowers than for the roses he had sent to her from the city.

Rosemary was happy at the camp. She was a girl of the open, and abandoned herself wholeheartedly to the joy of mountain climbing, fishing and riding along pleasant country byways. She developed an innocent camaraderie with the man almost too naive to please him. Nevertheless the day before her return he put his position with her to the test. The girl listened to him quietly.

"Oh!" she cried remorsefully, "I have just been thinking of you as a good comrade. Let me wait till I am home and away from you. Then maybe I'll know. I'll write you—tomorrow night."

The man knew that her womanhood was at last awake in her and that she would decide, but how he dared not think.

The next day Rosemary went home. She felt strangely old and troubled. She dreaded writing to Rodney that evening, for she did not yet know how she should write. Finally she went to the woods to think out her problem. She followed unconsciously a familiar fragrance. Soon, in a damp corner she found the source of the sweet odor she had never before associated with this place. Fringed gentians were there, dozens of them, holding up their glorious heads bravely in the rich, damp, new soil. In a flash she understood. Lester had transplanted them for her. She threw herself on the ground and buried her face in their sweetness. Then she laughed. Under one of the plants lay a little red-bound book—Lester's notebook. Nobody in the whole countryside but Rosemary knew that Lester earned his living in the winter playing in the symphony orchestra in the city, and found his joy writing nature poetry summers in the intervals of grubbing on his father's old farm. A relieved smile was cropping about the corners of Rosemary's troubled mouth. She would take Lester his book and ask him to help her settle the question she could not settle for herself. Lester had been, in truth, her refuge from many perplexities all her life. She ran down the lane and across the road to the pasture. She knew just where she would find Lester. He would be pretending to spade up the clods in the old mud-flat cranberry bog. In reality he would be spinning a scrap of verse in his busy brain. She smiled whimsically to herself as she remembered the fun her friends were always poking at this would-be farmer son of their old associate, Squire Fordham. They thought of him as a hack-musician who pieced out a precarious income on the old farm. Nobody dreamed that he played the countryman in summer for very love of the near-to-nature life. Rosemary had not even told Rodney the truth about him. She resolved to take Rodney to one of Lester's concerts the next winter. How amazed he would be!

And then suddenly, in the midst of her musings, Rosemary stood still in the rocky path. If she married Rodney, her newly awakened womanhood told her, her old comradeship with Lester would be impossible. And after all, could Rodney DuQuesne possibly mean as much to her as this dear fellowship? She sat down in the path and buried her face in her hands. She began to realize what her old comrade meant to her, had meant all her unthinking life, and must mean all the rest of her days if she were to be happy.

If—and then she knew she could never ask him the question she had meant to. She did not mean to, in truth. It had answered itself. Presently some one came stamping up the rocky way.

"Bless us! What's all this?" stormed an amazed voice. She was conscious that Lester Fordham was bending over her. "See here," he was demanding. "What is the matter? Why didn't you call me? You knew I'd hear. Are you hurt?"

Rosemary caught his hand and pulled herself to her feet. "Here," she laughed, "here is your little red book. I was bringing it to you when I thought—" she hesitated.

"Thought what?" prompted Lester, puzzled.

"Thought what?" he repeated, as Rosemary stood tongue-tied, blushing.

"I thought," she stammered, wincing beneath the man's insistent gaze, "how perfectly awful—it would be—if I were going to marry Rodney DuQuesne!"

Lester Fordham caught her gently by her downcast chin and uptilted her face till her honest, brown eyes looked into his.

"Rosemary Damarel, tell me the truth, would it be perfectly awful—if you were going to marry me?"

"You'll have to find that out for yourself," challenged the girl, her assurance returning, "only—I know I'm never going to marry anybody else in the world."

The Heathen Chinee Is Peculiar.

I walked into a Chinese laundry. It seemed to be the easiest way of getting in. He stood behind a little cage, evidently a protection against violence. He was scratching both elbows at the same time. I summoned up my best Chinese. "Very dirty washee. How long takee? Two weekee?"

He stopped scratching long enough to stare at me.

"I will endeavor to have it for you then, sir, but you know that the shortage of colored labor hampers our efficiency considerably."

EMERSON C. HARRINGTON,

Secretary of State.

How Floating Dust Causes Fire.

Spontaneous combustion is caused, so the chemists tell us, by floating particles of coal dust or other inflammable material jostling and clashing against one another until the friction they set up raises their temperature to the ignition point. If this explanation is correct, it would appear as if such fires could be prevented by perfect ventilation. Such, however, is not the case, for ventilation may actually help to bring about fire by spontaneous combustion. Air facilitates oxidation, really fanning the warm dust into a blaze. Keep air damp and quiet to avoid fire.—Popular Science Monthly.

Unexplored Canadian Land.

It is believed that nearly 30 per cent of Canada is still undiscovered, and if Indian reports are to be believed, there is in the basin of the Mackenzie river one of the largest areas of possible oil-bearing country on the face of the earth. The Indians report the existence of lakes a hundred miles and over that long in Yukon that no white man has ever seen, while even the Indians apparently know nothing of the as yet untrodden Mackenzie mountains.

Stand Your Ground.

Remember, each one must bear his or her own burden. Not a soul is free, We should keep this truth constantly before us, and then honestly try to do our best. Furthermore we should cultivate the habit of smiling. It will help us when all the world seems awry. A good-natured face is always a welcome sight, for it makes us forget our own wearisome affairs. Indeed, the woman who learns to laugh can master any problem that confronts her.—Exchange.

Easy to Translate.

An Irishman was sitting in an inn in County Mayo one day, while it was raining furiously outside. A nobleman's brougham drew up at the door of the hostelry. Blazoned on the panels of its doors were the arms of its owner, inscribed with the motto, "Fides regnat ubique." "Pat," asked some one of the Irishman, "how do you translate that?" "Easy enough," Pat replied. "'Fides regnat ubique'—Faith! it rains everywhere."

Bird and Insect Workers.

The arts of weaving and rope and net making are practiced by some of the lower forms of life, notably among caterpillars and spiders. The weaver birds of Africa and India, which are a species of finch, construct wonderful nests out of leaves by sewing them together.

No Nutriment in Bouillon.

Bouillon has no more nourishing qualities than hot salt water. All the nutriment is still in the meat from which the broth was made. The bouillon is a stimulant, that is all. There is no more horrible waste than to throw away a piece of meat from which broth has been made.

Work of Sponge Gatherers.

Sponges from the West Indies are torn from the rocks by a fork attached to the end of a long pole. The West Indian sponge fishers, as they float in their boats on the surface of the water, "spot" the sponges by means of a bucket which has a pane of glass fixed in the bottom.

Inconsistency.

Patience—"Why do you look so disparagingly at that man? He stood up for you at the meeting the other night when you were being abused." Patrice—"Yes, I know he did. But I came up on the same trolley car with him tonight, and he wouldn't stand up for me there."

Talking for Effect.

A good conversationalist is not one who talks for effect. It is generally easy to pick out the man who is talking in order to make an impression, who says not so much what he thinks, as what he imagines his listeners will consider clever.

Lengthens Life of Chain.

It has been discovered that a hemp rope twisted in and out of the links of an iron chain will make the chain last 70 per cent longer by reducing friction, and save from one-fifth to on-third of the price of a new chain.

Undesirable Impression.

"Some men," said Uncle Eben, "talks so much 'bout how honest dey is dat dey sounds like dey was inwardly wrestlin' wif a terrible temptation."

Keep Watch Over Thoughts.

What a responsibility we have in being parents to thoughts; how we should shun the mongrel thought-babies and keep them away.—Exchange.

Actions That Count.

Every natural action is graceful. Every heroic act is likewise decent, and causes the place and the bystanders to shine.—Emerson.

Then He's Busy.

No man is really busy unless he has a dozen things to do, eleven of which must be done first.—Boston Transcript.

Ill-Timed Comment.

Dean Ingo's suggestion at Oxford that St. Paul instructed women to cover their heads in church out of consideration for the "feelings of the angels" recalls Sir Henry Brackenbury's story of that apostle's limited knowledge of the sex, as expounded by a famous Brighton clergyman. After detailing the sufferings of St. Paul by shipwreck, imprisonment, etc., the preacher added, while his own wife sat immediately below the pulpit: "But St. Paul never had the greatest trial to which man can be submitted, for he was never married."

Tunnels Made by Ants.

Every one has observed trees that have been hollowed out by ants and it is apparent that their biting powers are equal to working in the hardest woods. In tunneling, ants are expert, and authentic cases are known of their tunneling under ditches and streams. Indeed a South American ant is said to have excavated a tunnel under the bed of the Parahyba river at a place where it is as broad as the Thames at London bridge.—W. L. McAtee, in the American Museum Journal.

Flowers on Mountain Tops.

It is known that upon many of the summits of the high mountain ridges of the Hawaiian islands, in the regions of heavy rainfall, are open bogs which support a peculiar and interesting flora. Many species form more or less hemispherical tussocks which rise above the general level of the bog. A showy lobelia with numerous large cream-colored flowers as much as three and a half inches long, peculiar violets and a sundew are found there.

New Hydraulic Air Compressor.

A novel hydraulic air compressor, designed for operation by water under a head of 200 or 300 feet, has two large vertical cylinders, from which the air is forced by the direct pressure of the water. When the air of one cylinder has been driven into the horizontal tank, a two-way valve automatically releases the water and turns the pressure into the other cylinder, making action continuous.

Yew Trees Longest Lived.

None of the native trees grow to such an age as the old-fashioned yew. Yew trees exist now that are known to be over 2,000 years old. Oaks run the yew closely in the race for age, and several have lived 1,500 years, it is claimed. Chestnuts reach the age of 300 occasionally, and elms, which are not particularly long lived as trees go, may see 300 before they die.

The War Garden

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

It was, indeed, a "war" garden and near to becoming a sanguinary battlefield. A vacant lot twenty by one hundred feet was the scene of acrimony, contention and bickering. John Ford, average business man, had arrived to look over the prospect. William Ashe, who lived down the block and whom he knew only by sight, appeared as the first-comer was measuring off the lot space with a tapeline. Ashe sniffed suspiciously.

"What you think you're up to?" he queried casually.

"Planning out a war garden. There's just space enough to get in potatoes for the winter and—"

"You don't mean to say you are pre-empting this special lot!" interrupted Ashe sharply.

"Oh, hardly that; Mr. Richardson, who owns the lot, has given me permission to use it for the season."

"Why, that's queer. Mrs. Richardson, before the family went South, distinctly told me to utilize it for a garden. What's more, I'm going to do it."

"You won't while I'm around to protect my rights," declared Ford, flushing up.

Then both spoke some bitter words, neither backed down sufficiently to share the space and each went home with an enemy for life on his list.

Now neither knew that pretty Nellie Ford, when she went to the public library to spend an hour or two in its reading room, had met clever, impressible Warren Ashe more than once. The latter was just ready to plan for an introduction to papa and mamma when the storm broke. Of course he heard all about it at his home, just as Nellie did at her own. The next day the twain met in a public park, deploring the bitter feud that bade fair to wreck their plans and hopes.

"And I was just thinking how happy I would be sitting on your porch evenings with your folks," mourned Warren.

"You are thinking of some way out?" she propounded.

"I am—hard," replied Warren, with vim. "Will you meet me here tomorrow?" and Nellie nodded assent, forlornly questioning him mutely with her eyes, but gained neither revelation nor promise for the present.

"I've arranged something fine," he spoke next day, when they met as usual at the library and then found their way to the little park retreat. "Nellie, I've arranged for the most famous war garden spot ever was. It came to me like an inspiration. I have a friend who owns the old dismantled factory near the river. You know there is all kinds of prairie space in its unused yard. Well, I have got permission to use a two acre plot. It will be plowed up by Monday and here's the list of seeds we need, and here's the money to purchase them. We'll look it over and if any particular vegetable suggests itself to you, note it down."

"Papa just dotes on chard," submitted Nellie.

"And my father vows he never had enough of salsify," said Warren. "Write both down, Nellie. We'll teach those two born fighters a lesson and see if it won't help on our deplorable case a bit."

Nellie came home from her afternoon stroll tired out many a time, but mother thought of tennis and passed by the incident. Warren became addicted to early morning exercise and ate breakfast like a farm hand, but papa Ashe never suspected that his son was one of the principals in a direful plot.

Then work at the hidden garden let down somewhat, for the seeds were all in, and the harvest promised. It was a day of unspeakable joy, that upon which Mr. Ford came home to find a large basket bearing a card with the words: "From a friend." He declared it took him back to boyhood days to feast over a stanch meal of good old-fashioned chard, such as he had not enjoyed for over twenty years. At that same hour, as mysteriously presented with a great hamper of salsify, Mr. Ashe smacked his lips in anticipation of a satisfying side dish of vegetable oysters for a week to come, Mr. Ford got up from his desk one afternoon a week later at receiving an unsigned note, saying: "If you want to know how your daughter is passing her afternoons, go to Wilson's old plant at 5 o'clock this afternoon."

He shrugged as, thither bound, he saw a little ahead of him Ashe, who had received a similar note as to his son. They both stood stark still rooted, as they came in view of a garden patch and Nellie and Warren, rakes in hand, smilingly confronted them. At one side was a great heap of chard, near to it a pile of salsify.

"Welcome, gentlemen!" hailed Warren cheerily. "Miss Ford and I thought that, as younger people and having more time to spare, we were duty bound to carry on your war-garden idea."

The two enemies regarded one another sheepishly. "I'm a mule—kick me!" uttered Ford.

"Just land me one for an old twisted grouch!" said Ashe, but their hands joined in handshake instead.

And those of Nellie and Warren stole together and they smiled rapturously, for the future was clear.

BREEDING POULTRY IN YARDS

More Difficult Than Keeping Small Flock of Hens for Eggs for Family Table.

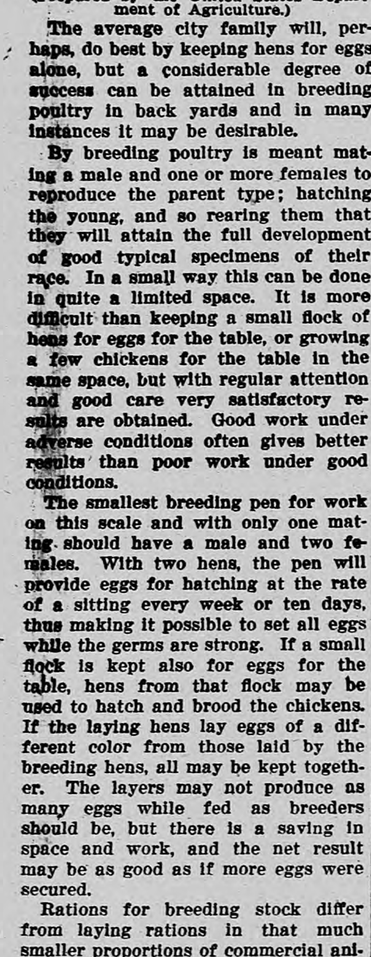
(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The average city family will, perhaps, do best by keeping hens for eggs alone, but a considerable degree of success can be attained in breeding poultry in back yards and in many instances it may be desirable.

By breeding poultry is meant mating a male and one or more females to reproduce the parent type; hatching the young, and so rearing them that they will attain the full development of good typical specimens of their race. In a small way this can be done in quite a limited space. It is more difficult than keeping a small flock of hens for eggs for the table, or growing a few chickens for the table in the same space, but with regular attention and good care very satisfactory results are obtained. Good work under adverse conditions often gives better results than poor work under good conditions.

The smallest breeding pen for work on this scale and with only one mating should have a male and two females. With two hens, the pen will provide eggs for hatching at the rate of a sitting every week or ten days, thus making it possible to set all eggs while the germs are strong. If a small flock is kept also for eggs for the table, hens from that flock may be used to hatch and brood the chickens. If the laying hens lay eggs of a different color from those laid by the breeding hens, all may be kept together. The layers may not produce as many eggs while fed as breeders should be, but there is a saving in space and work, and the net result may be as good as if more eggs were secured.

Rations for breeding stock differ from laying rations in that much smaller proportions of commercial animal foods are used, and special attention is given to supplying green feed regularly and abundantly. Heavy egg production is not desired. The object is to have the birds in perfect physical condition and at the height of vitality, that they may more surely transmit these qualities to their offspring.



Poultry Raising Under Such Conditions While Profitable, Requires More Attention Than Where Greater Space Is Available.

The greatest difficulty in back-yard breeding is rearing the young birds to secure their best development. As growing birds are more susceptible to adverse conditions than mature birds, and birds in close confinement are less rugged than those at liberty, the back-yard breeder must give the most scrupulous attention to every detail of the care of his young chickens. Shortcomings which might have no bad consequences with the adult birds, or with young chickens under more favorable conditions, may have very serious ill effects upon his young stock. However, by looking properly after all their wants and taking care not to overcrowd them in any way, fine specimens may be grown in yards where the space allowance is not more than 20 to 30 square feet per bird.

MAKING BEST USE OF GRAIN

All Old Hens and Poorly Developed Chickens Should Be Culled Out and Sold for Meat.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If efforts were made to dispose of all hens when their best laying days were over a large quantity of poultry meat would be placed on the market. All poorly developed chickens should be culled out and sold for meat, also. This would allow the poultry keeper to make the best use of his grain by feeding it to younger and more productive fowls.

Feather Pulling Habit.

Feather pulling is a vice peculiar to fowls in confinement and is due almost entirely to enforced idleness, though a lack of animal food in the ration may intensify the trouble.

Who Knows.

Mankind is proud of the beelike ingenuity and accuracy with which it pursues many of its activities; but we cannot be sure that the main result of our labor is not something as remote and unsuspected by ourselves as its service to the spring flowers is by the bee. We do not always foresee the reactions of our most careful enterprises; and, while the bee working among the spring blossoms may recommend us modesty, the wind which has its own indiscriminate but none the less effective system of fertilization, calls us to hope.

Progression.

How can you ever hope to conduct a business of your own if you never see what has to be done elsewhere? To see things and know at once what to do in the case shows you to be above the average. It won't be long until you will be recognized as such. The fact that you advance gives you self-confidence. That leads to the next step up. Progress is one series of seeing and doing the right thing at the right time. Some folks tell us that's wisdom. Call it what you will, it's profitable.—Exchange.

Derivation of Word "Prophet."

"Diseased Meat."

There is a wide difference in the terms "diseased meat" and "meat from diseased animals." In fresh pork for instance, the absence of live trichinae cannot be guaranteed by the vendor from any known practical method of inspection, but if the meat is properly cooked any trichinae present are killed and hence cannot produce disease.

DAIRY

PRODUCTIVE COWS PAY BEST

Income Over Feeding Costs Advances Rapidly With Increased Butterfat Yields.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The large producers are the most profitable cows in the dairy herd. Every dairyman strives to fill up his herd with animals known to be high producers, but few realize fully the remarkable rate at which profits advance as production increases, say dairying specialists of the United States department of agriculture. The following figures, obtained from the records of 1,668 cows in various cow-testing associations, show how rapidly with increased production of butterfat income advances over cost of feed.

Production and Profit.

150	18
200	29
250	43
300	56
350	68
450	108

As butterfat production increased from 150 pounds to 300 pounds, income over cost of feed advanced from $18 to $56, or as production doubled income above feed cost increased three times. As butterfat production increased from 150 pounds to 450 pounds income over cost of feed advanced from $18 to $108, or as production trebled income above feed cost increased six times. If no expenses except the cost of feed are considered, the cow that produced 450 pounds of butterfat was as profitable as 27 cows of the first group, whose average production was 100 pounds. If labor and miscellaneous expenses also could be taken into consideration the results would be much more striking.

High Producing Cow.

A further study of the records showed that the cost of roughage was about the same for all groups, but that the total cost of feed was somewhat greater for the more productive cows. The increased profit should therefore be credited in part to better feeding, but apparently it was more largely due to better cows. The present high cost of feed will eliminate the low-producing cow, or it must eventually eliminate the dairyman who keeps such cows. More cows are needed, but better cows are needed more. Certainly it pays to keep good cows and to feed them well.

BARREL TYPE OF CHURN BEST

Found by Dairy Specialists to Be Most Satisfactory—Scald Preparatory to Churning.

The barrel type of churn has been found by dairy specialists to be one of the most satisfactory churns. The dasher or plunger type requires a somewhat greater expenditure of labor. Earthenware churns are undesirable unless perfectly glazed, since, if pores are exposed, they absorb milk and cream which later decay. The churns with mechanical devices inside them are difficult to clean and sometimes injure the body of the butter. The churn should be scalded preparatory to churning, but should be cooled with water before the cream is placed inside.

STRIVE FOR STRONG CALVES

Six Weeks Before Parturition Cow Should Be Turned Dry—Aim to Prevent White Scours.

The care of the calf should start about six weeks before parturition, by turning the cow dry and enabling her to rest and put on flesh. If the cow is not turned dry, weak calves will generally be the result. Ordinarily a calf will be nursing in less than an hour after birth—extra strong calves in much less time. The herdsman or attendant should disinfect the navel of the calf at once in order to prevent white scours. A solution of carbolic acid or tincture of iodine will be very effective.

RAISING HEIFERS FOR DAIRY

Main Object Is to Produce Animals With Plenty of Constitution and High Capacity.

The main object in raising dairy heifers is to produce animals with plenty of constitution and capacity. The feed should be bulky and at the same time contain plenty of protein and ash. The protein and ash aid in the building of muscle and bone and bulky foods distend and develop the digestive organs. Alfalfa and clover hay and silage are excellent roughage for dairy heifers.

Indian Name Survived.

The survival of the original name of Cuba is a remarkable instance of persistence, as the island has been baptized and rebaptized many a time since its European discovery. Columbus first called it Juana, in honor of Prince John, the son of Ferdinand and Isabella. After Ferdinand's death it was called, in his memory, Ferdinanda. Subsequently this name was changed to Santiago, after St. James, the patron saint of Spain. Still later it was named Ave Maria, in honor of the Virgin Mary. But none of these names held, and the Indian name is still preserved.

What an Exporter Must Know.

A needle factory had sent to Aleppo, Turkey, needles that were tied up with green twine. The Mahometan merchant who had ordered them returned the package, for the reason that the use of the green, the color consecrated to the prophet, for such a purpose was a derision of religion. Another consignment of the same factory to China wrapped up in white paper was returned because the Chinese recipient would not accept goods packed in "paper of mourning." White is the mourning color of the Chinese.

Would Not Tolerate Sedition.

By the act of the New York legislature of March 30, 1781, provision was made to punish more effectually adherents to the king. It enacted that anyone who preached, taught, spoke, wrote, or printed that the king of Great Britain had dominion in New York or who seduced the allegiance of anyone in the state was guilty of a felony without benefit of clergy, though the court could commute the sentence from death to service for three years in the navy of the United States.

Shad Easily Taken.

The habits of the shad lend themselves admirably to the extermination of the fish. They approach the shores in immense schools, actually crowding one another in their efforts to reach the head of the fresh-water streams, where the spawn is deposited. Fishermen learned quickly how to intercept the run by nets in the bays and in the broad mouths of rivers, and the marketable shad are now nearly all caught in this way.

Another to Be Found.

A tracer sent to locate the old-fashioned man who wore a peachstone watch charm, reports from Clearfield, Pa.: "Located my man. He also carries a combination pen, pencil, toothpick, and rubber stamp. Any instructions?" Certainly; draw for expense money and hunt for the old-fashioned woman who used to grease the pancake griddle with a pork rind.—Buffalo News.

New Dyak Fashions.

Dyak is a word which conveys to most folk the idea of a people whose tribal pastime consists in cutting off the heads of their neighbors and preserving the dried skulls as ornaments for their homes. When the first missionaries went to Borneo, where the Dyaks live, they were fortunate if they kept their heads on their shoulders. Today the Dyaks have ceased head hunting, have given themselves to farming and have taken on clothes and other evidences of civilization. Instead of news coming once a month, as it did when missionaries first went to Borneo, it is now received by wireless.

Notable Men Epileptic.

John Bunyan's epileptic characteristics were well marked. Julius Caesar, Peter the Great, Wellington and Alexander the Great were sufferers, and the strong assertion is made that Napoleon was also subject to its mental control. Lord Byron was a notable epileptic, as was Balzac and the composers Mozart and Mendelssohn. Jean Jacques Rousseau was esteemed as one of the class, and even claim is lodged that Thackeray was a victim of the disease. These are but few of hundreds of noteworthy instances in the annals of the human race.

By GLADYS ETHEL SALTER

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

"That man is the most unmitigated scoundrel I have ever met!"

The speaker was himself neither moralist nor likely to shrink from any labor, no matter how villainous, where money was involved, but he evidently considered that the man who had just retired from the room overmatched him. The apartment was one of a suite occupied by the Waxon Secret Service, a private inquiry concern notorious for its record and methods. Here were hired sluggers, frame-up artists, all that malodorous crew who manufactured perjury evidence as a trade and for a moneyed reward undertook any mission under sheer murder. It was Wixon himself who spoke, and to a subordinate

"He's a bad one and no mistake," was the response, "but he's got a thousand to spend on a whim."

"A whim? A hideous crime! I won't take his case. If you want to, independent of the agency, go ahead."

"Business is business," oracularly quoted the subordinate, and went out into the next room, where Bryce Walworth was awaiting him. Certainly the countenance of this arch knave emphasized the statement of Wixon.

"Well?" propounded Walworth.

"No go with the boss. He's got a wife and children. As to myself, incidentally I'll take the job."

"Revenge is dear, but it's my only consolation. I will pay you in advance if you are sure you can keep Rev. Arthur Gride away from the ceremony."

"Yes, I can without doubt."

"And the substitute will pass muster as a welcome and finished adjunct of the occasion."

Bryce Walworth, the man without a soul, passed some money which the other, who was a man without a conscience, grimly pocketed. The former left the den, a fiendish smile on his thin, scornful lips. He had truly said that all he had to live for was revenge. On whom? A happy, innocent young girl, inspired with all the radiance of perfect love. He had loved Irma Dale. Now he hated her. She had repelled his advances, fully aware of his dissolute character. Her father had all but ordered him from the house, and Gerald Farnham won from him the only being on earth he craved to possess.

It was natural that Irma and Gerald should wed, for they had known one another since childhood. A year previous Gerald had asked General Dale for the hand of his daughter.

"She is too young," the father had said. "Go away for a year, let us see if absence will strengthen or dissipate your mutual love. Then, if you are both of the same mind, there shall be a wedding."

And now Gerald had returned, his love stronger than ever, and Irma had welcomed him as the only man she had ever cared for.

It was their wedding eve, two days later. A disappointment ushered in the ceremony. Rev. Arthur Gride, who was expected, telephoned at the last moment that he was called urgently to the bedside of a dying parishioner. Another clergyman was sought for in great haste. A sedate, well-appearing guest of the town hotel, "on his way to a call in the West," was located. He claimed to be of the same denomination as Reverend Gride. He performed the ceremony and Irma and Gerald were one.

It was at the end of a happy year that Gerald Dale was visited late one afternoon by a stranger. The latter announced a secret and important mission. He claimed to be a lawyer representing a client who was now at a safe distance, who had some valuable documents to sell.

"I shall leave you copies of these," stated the visitor. "They prove that an enemy of your family, out of revenge, supplanted the clergyman chosen to perform the wedding ceremony by the use of money, induced another to impersonate a clergyman, and your daughter and Gerald Farnham are not legally man and wife."

General Dale directed a look of horror at his visitor. His trembling hands took up the documents presented.

"You can purchase the original of those papers for fifty thousand dollars," observed the intruder. "Your daughter and her husband need never know the truth. You will hear from me by telephone within twenty-four hours," and the speaker was gone, leaving General Dale overwhelmed. He buried his face in his arms outstretched across the table. Thus Gerald Farnham found him, glanced over the papers and touched his wife's father on the shoulder.

"Asleep?" he questioned, and there was a strange thrill in his tones.

"No," groaned General Dale, "crushed! Those papers—"

"I have read them," said Gerald, and lightly. "Let me add a document, and he drew from his pocket a folded paper. Father, Irma and I deceived you. We were secretly married when you sent me away one year previous to the second ceremony, which we went through because of our secret. When this vampire, doubtless an emissary of Bryce Walworth, comes again, show him this, our first and valid marriage certificate."

Which General Dale did, and the miscreant slunk away like a whipped cur, to impart to Bryce Walworth the crushing intelligence that all his evil plots had failed.

DIVIDING THE SARBAGE TWIXT HOGS AND HUNS

Twenty-nine large American cities are in the Food Administration's bad books because they are throwing away garbage instead of getting out of it shells to whip the Huns and greases to work our guns.

These cities, with a combined population of over 5,000,000, are charged with wasting the following:—4,400,000 pounds of nitro-glycerine, 40,000,000 twelve ounce cakes of soap, 60,000,000 tons of tankage, with sufficient fertiliser element to produce 3,000,000 bushels of wheat. Value of material wasted is put at $5,000,000.

Even the solitary little home which utilizes enough odd bits of fat to take the place of a bar of soap and releases that much grease from the market for military use may proudly boast that it is operating a miniature munition plant. Fats and grease are in such tremendous demand that every ounce counts.

Another saving is urged in the matter of feeding garbage to hogs. Figures from 300 cities of more than 10,000 population show that in transforming garbage into pork show that 50,000,000 pounds of pork is being produced. The Food Administration claims that it should be 100,000,000 pounds and that the loss of 50,000,000 is due to poor separation of the garbage and the mixing of inedible materials. More than 350 American cities are not feeding garbage to hogs and the loss so entailed is 60,000,000 pounds of pork.

THE SUGAR EQUATION.

Hoover says, THREE POUNDS OF SUGAR A MONTH.

Three pounds—150 teaspoonfuls—228 lumps.

As substitutes for white sugar there are these seven varieties of sweeteners—brown sugar, maple sugar, maple syrup, honey, molasses, corn syrup, and such dried sugar fruits as figs, prunes and dates. The first three are a little less sweet than white cane sugar, but have more flavor and may be substituted cup for cup in recipes.

"FANK U MERIKA"
School Tot Writes Hoover

London.—When Herbert Hoover, the U. S. Food Administrator, reached this country he was overwhelmed with tokens of British appreciation of what the civilians of the United States have been doing to support the Allied cause through an unfailing food supply. But by none was he more touched than the little notes of thanks written by twelve hundred pupils of the London County School, at Harlesden. The school children of Maryland may well be proud of what their patriotic sacrifice has done to keep hunger away from their far-off school mates. Here are some of the notes:

"Fank U Merika." (Authoress aged four.)

"Please thank everyone in America for helping us to win the war by eating less food." (Authoress aged eight.)

"We British children think you American men, women and children are just splendid." (Author aged nine.)

"We should have gone hungry to school if it hadn't been for Mr. Hoover, (Author aged twelve.)

"President Wilson has chosen the most capable man in the world to be its Food Controller." (Authoress aged thirteen.)

Sir William Goode, Mr. Hoover's representative in London, says: "These little letters from British school children will make an excellent impression upon the children of America and their parents. They will further help to draw closer the ties that unite the two great democracies."

CONCERNING CHEESE.

Cheese contains about one-third water, one-third body-building material, and one-third fat, as well as valuable mineral salts.

Appetizing flavor.
Absence of waste.
Good keeping qualities.
Small storage space required.

Cure For Dysentery

"While I was in Ashland, Kansas, a gentleman overheard me speaking of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes William Whitelaw, of Des Moines, Iowa. "He told me in detail of what it had done for his family, but more especially his daughter who was lying at the point of death with a violent attack of dysentery, and had been given up by the family physician. Some of his neighbors advised him to give Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy, which he did, and fully believes that by doing so saved the life of his child. He stated that he had also used this remedy himself with equally gratifying results."

Busy Hours

You may have noticed that telephone service from 9 A. M. to 11 A. M. is occasionally a bit slower than from 7 A. M. to 9 A. M. The difficulty is this: most people, both at home and in business, do much of their telephoning between nine and eleven in the morning. It follows that the switchboard during those two hours is exceptionally busy and the operators exceptionally crowded with work. By distributing your calls throughout the day, you can help to even up the calling rate—and get quicker service.

STATE MEN WITHIN NEW DRAFT

Total Number Of Available Age 194,557—City's Quota 84,000

If the draft age is fixed, as is proposed, for men between 18 and 45 years, Maryland will be called upon to register 194,557 men, which is 72,959 more men than were registered in the first draft.

The number of new registrants in the United States based on the 18 to 45 limit will be slightly above 15,000,000. The class of 18 to 20 is expected to yield 2,000,000, while an army of 3,000,000 is looked for from the class of 31 to 45. From the class of 21 to 31 the country has taken 3,000,000 men of the best soldier material in history. The last-named class is expected to yield at least 2,000,000 in the new draft.

These are the minimum figures, and it means that every man of the seven millions will be of the type and physique of those now on the battle front in France.

Eighty-four thousand is the number of Baltimore men who will be required to register for the draft.

These figures are based on Provost Marshal General Crowder's estimate of 13,000,000 as the number of men in the United States between the ages of 18 and 21 and 32 and 45 and on the results of the registration here June 5, 1917.

Adjutant General Warfield, who will have charge of enforcing the new draft law when enacted by Congress, said that he had no statistics which would indicate with any reasonable degree of accuracy the results from the prospective registration. He suggested, however, that the figures probably would be somewhat in proportion to those of last year's draft.

Of the 194,000 to be furnished by Maryalnd if the draft ages are extended, the number accepted for service over 35 years will dwindle. The ultimate result will be, it is estimated, that about one-half of the men available through age will not be available through physical fitness.

LETTERS FORM "OVER THERE"

Somerset Boys Tell Of Soldiers' Life In France

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Huffington, of Baltimore, former residents of Princess Anne, last week received a letter from their son, Private Norris Huffington. The letter was dated July 9th, on active service with the American Expeditionary Force, France. The letter to his mother, in part, follows:

Your letter came to my "dug-out de luxe," somewhere near the firing line in France. How welcome it was! It was a rather quiet, delightful day, one that makes you wish you were elsewhere than here. However, tonight, sitting here in my dug-out, with an old-fashioned tallow candle for illumination, I write to you, and my heart warms toward all the world. You know the life of a soldier is rather trying at times. To do your duty as you see it is not hard, but to do your duty as others see it is a peculiar thing for one of independent thought and inclination. However, everything in life has become subordinate to our great achievement, which is victory over the forces who sow discord and strife in this world of ours. As I write, there is a peculiar thought which comes to me—that across the line, in the range of our guns, some other boy sits by the light of a candle and writes to his mother, even as I write to mine, with the same love and devotion, and the same longing to be home with her again. Let us hope that the time will soon come when both he and I can have the wish of our hearts granted.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Dryden last week received a letter from their son, Private Orville G. Dryden, Company I, 115th Infantry. The letter was dated July 6th, somewhere in France, and, in part, was as follows:

I have now moved from the rest camp and am stationed in a billet further inland. We are near a real nice French town and the people sure do treat us grand. You have heard of the southern hospitality, but it has nothing on the French. There is an old lady in the neighboring town, who I happened to meet, and she is trying to teach me the French language and I seem to be successful so for. This is a great fruit country and they have some of the best cherries I think I ever ate, and they are never satisfied unless we eat enough to make ourselves sick. It would amuse you to see the French money. If a man has five dollars in coin he thinks himself rich. A two-cent piece is as large as an American half-dollar. One franc (18 cents) is the size of a quarter. I only wish that you could have the same trip that I have had, in a different way, for I am sure you would have enjoyed it. I have seen more sights in the last month than ever before in all my life.

Thirty-Three Colored Men Called

The Local Board has received a call for thirty-three colored men to be sent to Camp Dix, Wrighstown, N. J., on or about August 22d, 1918. The men who are to go on this call have not yet been selected, but they will be selected and their induction orders mailed just as soon as a definite schedule for their entrainment is received. This call will almost exhaust the colored registrants of the 1917 class who are liable for general military service. Colored registrants of this class who have, heretofore, been deferred on farming claims will have to be called in order to fill this quota.

No further calls for white men have been received by the Local Board so far, but it is expected that the calls will come in within the next week. The Local Board has been directed by the Adjutant General to have all Class 1 men, both the old and new registrants, classified and examined by August 15th. The indications are that the calls yet to come in for the month of August will be heavy, and a very large proportion of the new registrants, as well as the old registrants in Class 1, will have to be called in order to fill the quota,

Whew, But It Was Hot Last Week

Last week all previous records for hot weather were broken. Not since the weather bureaus were established in the United States in 1874 had such high temperatures been recorded in the East and Middle West. Official thermometers in the large cities ranged from 104 to 108, and numerous deaths and hundreds of prostrations have been reported.

In Princess Anne the thermometers varied as to the height the mercury reached. The temperatures each day follow:

	Highest	Lowest
Monday	90	74
Tuesday	95	77
Wednesday	99	74
Thursday	91	73
Friday	94	78
Saturday	87	72
Sunday	88	72

The humidity, added to the heat, served to cause unusual suffering among men and beasts. It was impossible to accomplish much in any line of work on Tuesday and Wednesday and some of the farmers simply quit until cooler weather.

Mr. Peter Bentley, a member of the New York bar, was a visitor in Princess Anne last Tuesday.

NEW CHANGES IN GAME LAWS

Deputy Warden Denmead Tells Of Effects In Maryland

Talbott Denmead, Chief Deputy Game Warden, calls attention to the fact that the Conservation Commission is in receipt of the new regulations governing the taking of migratory birds under the treaty which was entered into between Great Britain, Canada and the United States. President Wilson has signed these regulations and the same have become effective from the 31st day of July of this year.

The important changes which effect Maryland are as follows:

1. No wild fowl shall be shot with a gun larger than a 10-gauge gun.
2. It absolutely prohibits the sale at all times of wild fowl, which includes ducks.
3. It absolutely prohibits at all times the killing of reedbirds.
4. It has prescribed an open season for doves, beginning September 1st, whereas the State of Maryland permits doves to be shot from the 15th day of August.
5. It has placed a bag limit of 25 ducks of all kinds per day.

The balance of the regulations are practically the same as were promulgated under the other Federal statute regulating the taking of migratory birds.

These changes are very important, as the Maryland laws were published previous to the issuing of these regulations, and, of course, these changes are not included in the publication of the game laws issued by the Conservation Commission.

Lieut. Beauchamp's "Pal" Killed

The death in France of Lieutenant Stuart Ellison McKeon formerly a resident of Philadelphia, is thus described by Lieutenant O. T. Beauchamp, son of Mrs. O. T. Beauchamp, of Princess Anne, a "pal" of Lieutenant McKeon, in a letter to friends in that city.

"We were all patroling the German lines," Lieutenant Beauchamp wrote, "when 'Mac' and some more ran into the Richthofen Circus, the best aces the Germans have. A lively fight started and the Americans were outnumbered before we could come to their assistance. 'Mac' and another fellow were shot down. 'Mac' fell from about 20,000 feet.

"We were very sorry to see him lost, but, at that, it is only a question of time before we all get it. If we die fighting like 'Mac' we will be willing to go. He was a good flyer, a good officer, and everybody liked him that knew him."

Registered Pigs At Pocomoke Fair

The Boys Pig Club members of Somerset and Worcester counties will have on exhibition at the Pocomoke Fair this week the pigs which they obtained from the Pocomoke banks. The Fair officials have built a large building for the pigs and have arranged for prizes. The boys will be admitted today and tomorrow, (Tuesday and Wednesday) when the pigs will be judged.

This show of registered pigs will probably be one of the first held in the State, and has been arranged by County Agent Keller, of Somerset county, and County Agent Oswold, of Worcester county.

Private William Sexton, of Camp Meade, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sexton, last week.

SHIPBUILDING AT WHITE HAVEN

Two 2500-Ton Schooners To Be Constructed At Once

The White Haven Shipbuilding Company, which is a private partnership consisting of H. W. Robertson, George H. Larmore and W. A. Anderson, who recently took over the property of the old concern which has been doing shipbuilding at that point for more than 30 years, has just landed a contract with the Emergency Fleet Corporation for the construction of two 2500-ton three masted schooners. The contract price has not been made public, but the contractors are to receive a bonus of $5,000 on each schooner provided they are finished and delivered on contract time, and it is the purpose of the builders to divide this bonus with their employes in order to complete the work on time.

The material for these boats has been ordered and some of it is now in transportation, and it is the purpose of the company to have everything in readiness to proceed as soon as the material arrives, so as to finish these boats in record time.

The proprietors of the yard are in need of 200 men, including carpenters, joiners, caulkers and laborers, and they are authority for the statement that Government wages will be paid for all men employed in this work.

The re-opening of these yards will mean much to White Haven and will start anew an old activity there, which for years was the chief one of the town. The yards at White Haven were run by Mr. Robertson, father of one of the present owners, for more than 30 years, and the re-establishing of this business will mean much to that community.

State Teachers to Meet In Baltimore

It was definitely announced last Thursday that the Maryland State Teachers' Association will meet in Baltimore on Friday and Saturday, November 29th and 30th. Originally the meeting was to have been held in the new educational building at Ocean City on September 3rd to 6th, but this date had to be cancelled because of the fact that it was found impossible for the Tri-County Institute, of Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset counties to be held at that time, as the county schools will open on September 2d, making it certain that no county teachers would be able to attend.

The Board of School Commissioners of Baltimore has been requested to grant the use of the Western High School for the sessions.

Attention of the teachers has been directed to the fact that the Friday following Thanksgiving Day will be a holiday, so that as the Thursday, Friday and Saturday of that week will be vacation days for the teachers they will have ample opportunity to attend sessions, and those coming from the rural sections of the state will have plenty of time to get back to their schools by the Monday following.

Elisha Lee, Federal manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad, says that the number of women in the employment of the railroad increased from 5,682 on May 27 to 7,227 on June 5.

CROTHERS OUT OF THE RACE

Will Not Run Against Congressman Price In First District

State Senator Omar D. Crothers, of Cecil county, has withdrew as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the First District. This leaves the field to Congressman Price, who is running for renomination, as there is no other candidate at this time, and it is believed to be certain that there will be no other entry.

Mr. Crothers said that the President had decreed that "politics is adjourned," and that as a primary fight in the First district might endanger the election of a Democrat, he felt it proper to withdraw. At the same time he put upon the State leaders the responsibility for Mr. Price's candidacy in the event that he is defeated in November.

Mr. Crothers' withdrawal is a step toward the straightening out of the Congressional situation, which is believed to be desired by most of the politicians in both parties. They think this is a bad time for fights. Senator Crothers' statement announcing his withdrawal follows:

"I made an announcement several weeks ago that I would be a candidate for Congress to succeed the Hon. Jesse D. Price. At that time no one had entered the field. I was prompted to make the announcement then because I thought a Wilson Democrat ought to be elected to the next Congress to assist the President in carrying out his splendid program for the successful termination of the war.

"It will be recalled that my late uncle, Governor Crothers, and myself advocated the nomination of President Wilson in 1912, while some gentlemen, who are now high in the councils of the Democratic party were doing their utmost to see that Maryland was landed on the side of Speaker Clark. And it was because of my consistent adherence to the Wilson principle ever since that I thought it would probably be right for me to be a candidate for Congress at this time.

"It had been urged upon me by my friends that Mr. Price had previously had two very narrow escapes from defeat and would probably not be a candidate again. Recently, however, President Wilson has stated that 'politics should be adjourned for the period of the war,' and that all present members of Congress who have been faithful to their country's cause should be returned; and as Mr. Price is now a candidate for re-election, and a primary contest would necessitate the expense of holding a primary election, which should be avoided at this time, and might endanger the election of a Democrat to Congress, I have decided not to be a candidate.

"I hope this determination is not a mistake on my part, as I should be very much disappointed if there should be a slip up at the general election and President Wilson should lose a supporter in the next Congress. However, this responsibility will not be up to me, and the party leaders in the State, who should be thoroughly posted on the political situation, will be responsible to the people if such a serious thing should happen as the district being lost to a Democratic member and supporter of our President."

The Great Salisbury Fair

The season for agricultural fairs is again here, and these fairs will prove a source of pleasure to our people who love to see fine spirited racing, who love to hear the noise and chatter of the fakers and showmen who line the midway, calling out the attractiveness and unusual features of their specialties; as well as those who like to see fine exhibits of fancy work, flowers, household goods, agricultural products, pure-bred poultry and other stocks. Again on the Fair grounds one meets year after year familiar faces of friends and acquaintances who often have not been seen during the past twelve months.

Of all the Fairs on the Eastern Shore, the great Salisbury Fair, at Salisbury, Md., easily takes the lead in racing, in exhibits, in midway and free attractions. This Fair is scheduled to open Tuesday morning, August 20th, and until the close on Friday, August 23rd, the gates will be thronged with tens of thousands of men, women and children coming from every section of the Shore, including Virginia and Delaware. The management this year announces an unusual attractive and interesting program, which can be found on another page of this week's issue of the Marylander and Herald. The free attractions consist of the Three Alex, McDonald Trio and Ledegar the Flying Dutchman. Besides these, a larger line of exhibits in the various departments is promised than ever before. The outlook for fast races and good horses is said to be better than for several years past. One feature of this great Fair, which has proved especially interesting to its patrons, has been the fast motorcycle races on the track. This year some of the fastest cyclists of the country are said to have entered the races, and this makes it certain that these races will be even more interesting than usual. If one enjoys a Fair, he cannot fail to be pleased if he attends the great Salisbury Fair.

5,000,000 FOR AMERICAN ARMY

General March Explains Why Draft Age Limit Is To Be Raised

In urging enactment of the Administration man-power bill extending draft ages from 18 to 45 years, General March told the Senate Military Committee that the War Department plans an army of approximately 5,000,000 men to be raised as soon as possible.

While realizing the importance of the measure, General March said he did not believe it necessary to recall Congress before the present recess plan expires on August 24, providing the bill could be reported at that time.

About July 30, General March said, the United States reached a decision to enlarge its military program to carry out the policies agreed upon at the recent inter-Allied conference at Paris to speed up prosecution of the war and bring it to an early conclusion.

The Chief of Staff entered into a general discussion of the entire subject and the necessity for amending the present law.

Questioned by Senators regarding the apparent "change of front" of the War Department in its war program, General March told of the Government's decision in accord with the Paris conference.

For the new program Secretary Baker and other officials concluded that there must be an extension of the draft age.

While about 3,000,000 men are now under arms, army officials think there should be approximately 5,000,000 men at home and in France. In order not to disturb the present draft system and to avoid calling men who had been given exemption, extension of the draft ages is necessary.

From General March's testimony and other information received the committee has gained the impression that while all men between the ages of 18 and 45 would be subject to military duty under the new law, it is proposed that those between 18 and 20 years of age shall be kept in this country until the last.

130,207 MEN CALLED TO CAMP

Maryland Will Send 5,618 Draftees This Month

Calls for 130,207 draft registrants qualified for general military service, to join the colors before the end of August, were issued last Thursday night by the Provost Marshal General.

One hundred thousand white registrants from 43 states are ordered entrained between August 26 and August 30. Twenty-one states and the District of Columbia are directed to furnish 30,207 negro registrants, to entrain August 22-24.

These orders bring the number of men called out in August to about 300,000, the number contemplated in the present program.

Maryland will send 3,850 white registrants to Camp Meade and 1,768 negroes to Camp Dix, N. J.

Delaware will send 150 whites to Camp Meade; Pennsylvania 10,000 whites and 892 negroes to Camp Lee; Washington 1,400 whites to Camp Lewis and 457 negroes to Camp Lee; West Virginia 1,500 whites to Camp Greenleaf, and Virginia 651 negroes to Camp Lee.

An order suspending further civilian volunteering for officers' training camps was signed last Thursday by the Secretary of War. No more applications from civilians for admission to the camps will be accepted by the War Department, the order says, until the legislation affecting draft ages now before Congress is disposed of. The orders also exclude civilians from appointment to officers' training camps until further notice.

$15,000 Loss By Fire At Laurel

Fire thought to have been started by crap players in a vacant house owned by Charles M. Pusey, destroyed that property and five others, together with a dozen automobiles, early last Tuesday morning at Laurel, Delaware. The loss is estimated at $15,000 and but for the arrival of fire apparatus from Salisbury the business section of the town would have been wiped out. The buildings destroyed were: Garage of Mitchel & Olphant, stable of S. F. Burford, stable and tenant house of Charles M. Pusey, stable of Robert Knowles and dwelling of the estate of W. C. C. Knowles. The fire burned for four hours.

License Fund To Repay Loss

The money received from the dog license fees in Somerset county is kept by the treasurer of the county, and it will be used to pay damages for injury and loss to sheep, poultry and live stock. Any inhabitant who has live stock destroyed may apply to a justice of the peace, who shall appoint three disinterested persons to appraise the damages. The report shall be reviewed by the county commissioners and they shall award the amount they deem fair.

The Turning Point

By JESSIE ETHEL SHERWIN

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

Myra Blake gave utterance to a shriek as there sounded a crash just beyond the fence surrounding the little woodland cottage, on the porch of which she and Mrs. Mason were seated.

Her hostess, white-haired and fragile, arose, all a-tremble, but she strove to be calm, as was her wont where an occasion called for the exercise of good judgment and prompt action.

"Don't be unnerved, Myra," she said in her quiet tone. "Some one is hurt and we must go to his aid."

"Oh, Mrs. Blake! Do you think the man is killed?"

Mrs. Mason leading the way, they hurried along the graveled path and came out upon the outside walk. Lying upon the lawn was a man of middle age, and dashing around the next corner was a horse and buggy. The hind wheel of the vehicle lay in the road, where it had collapsed after striking a rock directly in front of the cottage. The collision had started up the horse, whose sudden dash had thrown its driver out of the buggy. Mrs. Blake leaned over the victim of the accident.

"Bring a basin of water and some towels, Myra," she said, "and the bottle of camphor. He is breathing regularly. I think he has been only stunned."

It was after a series of ministrations that the victim of the accident opened his eyes. It was some moments before he fully roused from a doze.

"It's my arm," he said, with a wince. "I think it is broken."

"You had better let us get you into the house, where you can be comfortable," suggested Mrs. Mason. "You help on that side, Myra, and be careful of the injured arm."

They got the sufferer into the house, led him to a couch and then Mrs. Mason gave Myra some directions. They were brief and to the point, and Myra started away to execute her mission with dispatch. Within an hour a doctor was in charge of the sufferer, and some neighbor boys had traced the horse and vehicle and got them to the village livery, where they belonged.

"It looks as though I was landed down on you good people for a spell," the stranger observed, as Myra brought him his supper on a server, and Mrs. Mason a cot from the attic and placed it in order in a corner of the room. "You see, I'm a stranger here, on business, but it will have to wait till I get over this shake-up. My name is Brooke Delmar, and I am in the moving picture business. The doctor says it will be a week before I can get around rightly. There is no hospital here, he says, and I'd be glad to pay you double rather than be laid up at the hotel, where I suppose I wouldn't get much care."

"There is plenty of room here," Mrs Mason advised the patient. "You are welcome to such attention as we can give you."

The victim of the accident soon learned the situation at the little cottage. Mrs. Mason was a widow with a wild and reckless son, who had left home two years before and then was utterly lost to her. In striving to trace him, the distressed mother had received sorrowful news. The last she had heard of him was that he had become dissipated, and had left the city in company with a group of men bound for some newly discovered gold fields in the West.

If the anxious mother missed him, she had a sharer in her sadness and hopes. Before he left home Harvey Mason and Myra Blake, a neighbor's daughter, had been something more than friends. They were not engaged, but Harvey had shown his love for her in many ways. It seemed, however, neither his affection for Myra nor that for his mother had served to shield the young man from the temptations of city life. Mutually those two gentle, patient souls mourned over the lost loved one; mutually they hoped that some day he would return.

Within a week Delmar was convalescent. He told the widow, as he handed her a liberal sum of money, that this but poorly paid for her kindness and care. "I'm going to throw a few hundreds in your way, though," he added. "I'll be along here in about a week with my photo men. I want to stage some scenes in the old house here as part of a movie I intend to bring out. All you have to do is to act natural—like you and Miss Blake standing before the picture of your son, and all that."

Harvey Mason had prospered. He had made a rich strike in the mining district and was a popular spendthrift. One night he and some friends rode to town for "a good time." It wound up at a movie show. Startled, sobered, Harvey noted a scene that thrilled him—his old home, his mother and his old sweetheart, arms entwined, sorrowfully regarding his picture on the wall!

Next day he sold his holdings and celebrated the bargain by saying good-by to his associates. "My last drink, boys," he announced as they stood at the bar, and he drained—a glass of water.

And a month later Harvey Mason entered his abandoned home, to bring joy and brightness where there had been sorrow and despair.

HOME TOWN HELPS

BUILT ALONG MODERN LINES

Eastern Journal Gives Excellent Example of How Subdivision May Be Laid Out to Advantage.

We have recently received circulars describing one real estate development now under way which excellently illustrates a new stand of the employer. In this case the manufacturer had a tract of well-wooded land rising from a river bank in a gentle slope, acquired at a reasonable price several years ago, and offering every opportunity for enlightened treatment. Half a century ago this would have been defaced by the erection of primitive barracks overhanging the river, built as near each other as possible, and run up into the air as many stories as the most exhausted employee could manage to climb at the end of the day's work. A pestilential eyesore would have been created to dishearten those condemned to dwell within it, and to rebuke the town it defaced.

Under the new dispensation another motive prevailed. A first-class architect experienced in town planning was employed; the acreage available for the settlement it was desired to found was studied; a street plan based on the natural advantages of the site, and avoiding the wasteful and extravagant checkerboard system too prevalent in the past, was laid out; accessibility of the nearby city, the company's works and the established centers of public interest was considered; the exposures of the various lots received the weight they deserved and a comprehensive plan for the community was worked out. Art for art's sake was not encouraged, but art as an efficient handmaiden of practicability had a free hand. Monotonous uniformity of houses was avoided by modifications of the standard types adopted, based on the site chosen for each structure. Two principal thoroughfares crossing the tract were made broad enough for general traffic; the other streets are narrow as to roadway but well equipped as to tree-planting space, grass plots and sidewalks. The common error of attempting to make every residential street a boulevard was avoided; the not infrequent mistake of establishing alleys was not committed. Ginger-bread, mock heroics, the "monumental works" of so many commercial suburban communities, were studiously evaded.—Boston Herald.

Art in the Garden.

In considering the art of the garden, it will be noted that an easy ground line as well as an easy sky line is advised and that no straight line should occur in either. While one may place upon paper very artistic lines governing the ground plan of a garden, it is equally necessary in the preservation of art that the sky line should be artistically broken up and not present a monotonous appearance such as is produced by the top line of a hedge or fence or wall. Nearly everyone has noticed instances of beautiful lines in the top of groups of trees and shrubs, either in nature or planted by man as seen when they are silhouetted against the sky. By a little study of those effects one may determine how his shrubs and trees should be disposed to obtain the proper effect.

Do Your Part.

You like to see a street well kept and clean, with no scraps of paper blowing round and no rubbish on the pavements. And since you prefer to live on such a street, be sure that you are careful not to throw litter where it will blow into someone's dooryard. Boys and girls have more to do than they realize in helping to make the towns and cities where they live orderly and attractive. Do your part.

Yet Another Geddes!

Sir Hedworth Meux, when he asked in the house of commons recently if there was not one Jenny Geddes who threw a stool at a bishop, doubtless had in mind a scene which occurred in St. Giles' cathedral, Edinburg, in 1637, when the English Liturgy was introduced against the will of the Scots, and Jenny, a market woman, threw her stool at the head of the dean—not the bishop—on his commencing to read the service. A tablet by the spot commemorates her action as that of "a brave Scotswoman" fighting for liberty.—London Tit-Bits.

WAR GARDENS MADE GOOD.

Potatoes were a luxury in England little more than a year ago. Then came the wholesale planting of potatoes in back yards and small garden plots and fields all over the country. Farmers and professional market gardeners laughed at the agricultural efforts of people who had never wielded a hoe before. The wiseacres predicted stupendous failures of the crops these lawyers, shoemakers, newspaper reporters, and carpenters were trying to raise. But the know-it-alls were wrong and the amateur gardeners harvested so heavy a crop that there were two hundred thousand tons of potatoes over and above the country's requirements.

Potato bugs are unknown in England which, in pre-war days, often shipped the surplus of bumper potato crops to the United States.

WORTH A CHANCE.

The small boy stood at the garden gate and howled and howled and howled. A passing old lady paused beside him.

"What's the matter, little man?" she asked in a kindly voice.

"O-o-oh!" wailed the youngster. "Pa and ma won't take me to the pictures tonight."

"But don't make such a noise," said the dame admonishingly. "Do they ever take you when you cry like that?"

"S-sometimes they do, an'—an' sometimes they d-d-don't," bellowed the boy. "But it ain't no trouble to yell!"—London Opinion.

Advice to Mothers.

She was a very careful woman and when she noticed that the little boy was rather indifferent as to his personal appearance it worried her very much.

"Your conduct troubles me very much," she said. "Now tell me how I can get you to wash your face regularly?"

POSTED.

"Seeing the watah weminds me that I can tell you how much falls ovah Niagara Falls, to a gallon."

"How much?"

"Four quarts, bah Jove."

Playing Safe.

There was a man who feared the show
That trivial error makes.
He never did a thing, and so
Avoided all mistakes.

Penalty of Lying.

"Sedentary work," said the college lecturer, "tends to lessen the endurance."

"In other words," butted in the smart student, "the more one sits the less one can stand."

"Exactly," retorted the lecturer; "and if one lies a great deal one's standing is lost completely."—London Tit-Bits.

He Was Up-to-Date.

Little Johnnie, aged seven, was being admonished by his father for fighting with the boy next door. "I never got into a fight when I was a boy," said his parent.

"I know, dad," said Johnnie; "but these are war times."—People's Home Journal.

Almost Unkind.

"You must try to keep your temper when the weather gets hot."

"And yet," mused Miss Cayenne, "it does seem to irritate everybody so when one person manages to seem perfectly cool and comfortable on a summer day."

Bad Start.

"How did your husband's gardening turn out?"

"Not well so far," responded the serious woman. "The outdoor work gave him such an appetite that he ate the potatoes instead of planting them."

ONE THING THEY MUST LEARN.

"Why do you think Slobber's wife was a chorus girl once?"

"'Cause she always wears a happy smile."

Brain Fag.

The "loafer" now is out of date,
Let's do the best we can
From day to day to stimulate
The tired business man.

Truth Crushing.

"Truth crushed to earth will rise again," said the poetry quoter.

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum; "but sometimes she gets up so late that an important train of thought has gone on without her."

Only Way.

"My wife has never once answered me back or wanted her own way."

"How on earth did you manage to get a wife like that?"

"Easily done. I never married."

Gloria

By RAY AFTON BELL

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

"You're slipping, Bardon," announced Mr. Paul Branscombe, efficiency manager of the great mercantile house of Terhuane & Co. "Two days' work behind."

"I realize that," replied Irving Bardon, "but the extra work was delayed a week in the revision department and I am shy an assistant."

"You must have your desk cleared by Saturday—invariable rule of the house."

"Impossible," replied Bardon, with decision.

"We don't favor that word here," and the man who treated his underlings as machines passed on his way.

Irving Bardon gazed out of the window.

"I'm through," he decided, and looked around for Branscombe. In the hall outside he made out the object of his search, obsequiously bowing to Miss Gloria Terhuane, daughter of the principal in Terhuane & Co.

"I have decided to resign my position, Mr. Branscombe," he spoke. "Of course I won't leave until you find some one to fill my place."

"That's easy," declared Branscombe. "You needn't wait a minute."

For over a year Bardon had been contributing an article each month to a magazine named "The Garden." All his efforts covered flowers, a field in which he excelled, for he was an expert botanist. About a month previous the publisher of the magazine had made him an offer to give his time exclusively in his service. Half an hour later he was seated opposite the editor.

"I have given up my clerical position," Bardon announced at once. "Is the work you offered still open for me?"

"Essentially, and I hope you will come with us," replied the editor heartily. "The regular articles at double the old price and the weekly salary until you have finished your work. It's a living, anyway, Bardon, and you love the work. You shall have a twenty per cent interest in the book when it is published and a third share of the collection feature."

A week later Bardon left the city. Specifically, he was to gather material for a book on the wild floral treasures of Wisconsin. In adition to this he was to so map out the state that on demand he, with assistants, could garner up large quantities of the different flowers, which were to be pressed and set in albums to be sold to lovers of flowers. Never did an enthusiast enter more joyfully into congenial work than he. The first month on his tour he discovered four new varieties of orchids unlisted in the flora of the state. To one of these, a velvety mass of daintily streaked and striped color, he gave the name of "Gloria." He smiled at the whimsicality of naming the flower after Miss Terhuane, whom he had seen only twice in his life, at a distance. She had so completely filled his ideal of a lovely woman, however, that he felt the honor worthily bestowed.

He had come across a wild glen one afternoon and had sat down to enter memoranda in his note book, when he discovered a small dog acting strangely. The dog would plant itself directly before him, bark furiously and pluck at his clothing. Bardon arose and allowed the little animal to guide him through a stretch of woods. At its edge was an abandoned gravel pit. There the dog halted. Bardon approached nearer to gaze into its gloomy depths. The ledge gave way, he slipped, slid, and landed over thirty feet down in a sort of tunnel.

"Why, what's this!" he uttered, as his eyes made out a feminine form lying prone. Then he understood. The owner of the dog had ventured too near the yielding edge of the pit and had preceded him into it.

Bardon flared a match and illumined the face of the victim of the fall. He stood transfixed. He had seen those lovely features before—they belonged to Miss Gloria Terhuane!

Bardon pressed his canteen of water to the bloodless lips. His charge soon recovered consciousness. There were mutual explanations and he thrilled at the grateful recognition of his services, as at last after arduous efforts he succeeded in reaching safe ground.

Miss Terhuane told him of being a guest at a summer resort hotel two miles distant and he escorted her thither. Their conversation developed that she like himself was interested in the collection of nature's free gifts. She was deeply interested as he told her the names and history of some of the rarest varieties in her specimen book.

"Why, that is my name!" exclaimed Miss Terhuane a few days later when, engaged in a mutual tour of the woods, she chanced to notice in his case the labeled "Gloria" flower.

"It was named after you," confessed Bardon frankly, and there was a new bond of sympathy and friendship cemented.

A month after the marriage of Gloria Terhuane to Irving Bardon, the efficiency manager of Terhuane & Co. for the first time saw the happy couple in an automobile.

"I never dreamed it!" he exclaimed. "He is the lucky Bardon, eh? The man who slipped! The freaks of fate! I must cultivate him now," but he never learned how a further slip into a darksome pit had brought light and joy and a lovely wife to the man he had disdained.

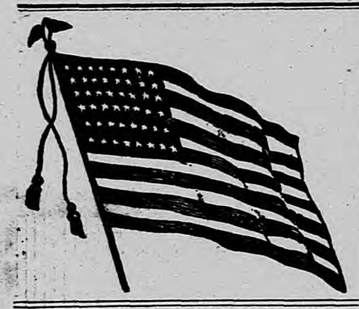
TUESDAY MORNING, AUG. 13, 1918



The general definition of a luxury is something that some one else enjoys.

The man who wears a patch on his shoes need not be ashamed of it, as it is one variety of Thrift Stamp.

The pacifists think it is wrong to fight for the privileges of freedom which other men died to gain for us.

The shortage of the cotton crop will be a hard blow to the people who are accustomed to buying all wool clothes.

So far no objection has been raised to the tax on musical instruments by the neighbors of the young lady who plays on the piano.

After a long and patient effort some of us find it impossible to keep cool in hot weather by remembering the cold of last winter.

When the Germans hold back our troops for a day after retreating for a week, they announce they have won a glorious victory.

The rich are organizing to teach economy to the poor, and the poor should now organize to show the rich how to save money for Liberty bonds.

The first thing that happens after the government urges us to use a food substitute is that the food dealers get together and put up the price before the first customer gets in.

While the experts have delayed production of machine guns by wrangling about the type to be made; our boys have gone in and captured a lot of them from the Germans. You can't keep good men down.

A STUDENT RECRUITING CAMPAIGN

It is announcing that the government will carry on a campaign to recruit more students for colleges and universities. It is felt that after the war we are going to want highly trained men more than ever before.

While there are some specimens of educated fools who go through college and never amount to anything, most college men are successes in life. They are not always great money makers, though their salaries average high.

But even if they do not all turn out captains of industry, or millionaires, they are of value to the community. They have learned to think things out for themselves. The demagogues and charlatans who so often have easy victories at the polls, don't get many votes among the college trained men.

It is to be hoped that the government's plan will also recruit students for the technical schools of college grade. There are some men who will never do well at books, but could be tremendously useful if their mechanical abilities were trained.

AUTOMOBILE WRECKS

Most people who drive an automobile do not realize the tremendous power of the mechanism, nor the damage that it can do if not correctly controlled. But the garages that handle automobile wrecks often see things that the general public might well know.

There is a tendency among many newspaper reporters, in cases where a bad accident results from carelessness, to gloss over the affair. They have some feeling for the relatives of a dead man and do not like always to reveal the whole story of his folly. While this attitude is creditable to a reporter's sympathies, yet it would be for the public advantage to know why these things happen.

A high speeding car is easily deflected by faults in the road so that it will leave the traveled way. A friend tells us of a case where a car thus sideswiped an obstruction several feet outside the traveled road on one side. The wheel was wrenched from the driver's hands, the car crossed the road obliquely, climbed a bank a yard high, turned turtle and pinned the driver underneath. When help arrived the victim was piteously calling for assistance and died within an hour.

The energy in a big car is enough to turn the wheels of a good-sized factory. The driver does not realize the havoc it can create, or the dangerous positions it can get into, if it strikes another car or leaves the traveled way. It would do many people good to be present at one of these wrecks and hear the piteous wails of a victim calling for help.

As automobile travel increases the sight of wrecks along the way become more common, and should be a warning against reckless driving to all who pass and observe their ghastly details.

WHY TOWNS GROW

"Town boosting" campaigns are a favorite subject, and often the means of doing big things. Many people think that when they have had a rousing Board of Trade meeting, and have appointed a committee to locate some new industries, results can be expected at once. Commonly these committees go to sleep and the town goes on in the old rut.

To get any results it is necessary to organize. But the appointment of decorative committees, that merely meet and gossip, is useless. Getting new industries is difficult, as most of the old established firms prefer to stay where they are. But there are always chances to get new concerns or new branches of old ones: It takes hustle to make known a town's advantages and solicit co-operation. But the thing can be done, and the towns that grow have usually done it.

Many towns have strained and sweated to land industries from a distance and have overlooked chances near at hand. The Board of Trade in one community worked for years, and after great effort persuaded an underwear factory to move in. The business men of the town cheerfully contributed. The factory struggled along for two or three years and finally gave up.

Meanwhile a group of young men, natives of the town, who after a long struggle had built up quite a business, moved away because they could not get any help toward enlarging their industry.

The best proposition of all is apt to be the one that comes from our young men who are attached to the soil. If they can once get started in business in their home town they will stick. No prophet is without honor except in his own country. The proposition that the home fellow puts forth is viewed with too little respect, much less than if he were presenting it in some strange place.

If people want their home town to grow they must expect to take some chances. There must be a willingness to lend a little capital to put what seems like a worthy proposition on its feet. If a failure is made now and then, there should be no discouragement. If everyone took hold the loss on any one has not been much.

"Sic" Your Sea Dogs On, Mr. Secretary

The submarine operations on this side have been mainly mosquito bites. The destruction of the cruiser San Diego is the only substantial achievement to the credit of the underseas boat in a campaign of two or three months. What it has not been able to do has been to delay or interrupt our war service to Europe. Nothing could more emphatically demonstrate its impotency than this failure.

But even mosquito bites are now annoying, and when submarines have the impudence to come up within half a mile of the beach off Hatteras and destroy a United States lightship, we all feel that it is about time to smash these poisonous insects. Our naval patrols and coast-guard ships have so far been singularly unlucky in being out of the way whenever and wherever a submarine has appeared. We hope Mr. Daniels will wake up his sea-hounds. It is irritating to have these depredators hang around our coasts with impunity. Certainly some means should be devised of protecting lightships and other essential guides to commerce.—Baltimore Sun.

Length Of The War

"Far-seeing men believe that we have just begun to fight, and wise men realize that the only safe policy is for us to assume that the struggle will be long and bitter.

"It is vain to ask how long the war will last, for such questioning tempts us to guess, and when we go to guessing our self-interest causes us to guess the best and so to take some chance in effort or sacrifice. All that we know is that we must win."—From address by Clarence Ousley, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. He'll Be In A Hurry

The next Liberty Loan will be the largest yet asked, and the campaign for it will be the shortest yet undertaken. The country will be requested to subscribe $6,000,000,000, and to do it in three weeks. Two billion dollars a week is, in our refreshing American vernacular, "going some," but we are some goers, and the harder the task the more we glory in it.

It will be a whirlwind campaign, so get ready to whirl and to be a whirler. Between this and the 28th of September do your thinking, your planning and your saving, so that you may lose no time in responding to the doorbell when your Uncle Samuel rings. Don't keep him waiting. He'll be in a record-breaking race. Be prepared to speed him on his way.—Baltimore Sun.

To Improve Your Digestion

"For years my digestion was so poor that I could only eat the lightest foods. I tried everything that I heard of to get relief, but not until about a year ago when I saw Chamberlain's Tablets advertised and got a bottle of them did I find the right treatment. Since taking them my digestion is fine." — Mrs. Blanche Powers, Indiana, Pa.

Find Quentin's Grave

On a wooden cro s at the head of a grave at the edge of a wood at Chamery, east of Fere-en-Tardenois, is this inscription:

"Lieut. Quentin Roosevelt—buried by the Germans."

German newspapers announced several days ago that Lieutenant Roosevelt, who disappeared during an aerial combat on July 17th, had been buried by the Germans at Chamery, but until last Wednesday the grave was not discovered. It was found by an American aviator. The inscription is in English.

A Bilious Attack

When you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take three of Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. They only cost a quarter.

HAYMAN'S HARDWARE DEPT.

THERE IS A MATERIAL DIFFERENCE.—Some ice receptacles are built to sell and all that can be said of them is the price. In many instances the manufacturer, or seller, is not heard from any more. You have probably noticed that standard merchandise does not get into such hands, and is handled only by reliable merchants. We desire to call your attention to our line of Baldwin Dry-Air Refrigerators, which we have handled for fifteen years, our sales increasing each year. If you want to know about the merit of this line ask the users how their ice bill compares with those using other makes. Our stock is complete. Prices in keeping with quality. Would be glad to show you through the line.

All the real estate and equipment of the defunct Peninsula Rapid Transit Company was sold at public auction by the trustee, F. W. C. Webb, on Saturday, the 3rd instant, at the Court House door, in Salisbury. The purchaser was The L. W. Gunby Co., their bid being $1,160.00. A Camp Meade letter dated Sunday, the 3rd, said: "Many a sick soldier in this camp will have cause to express his gratitude to the members of the Improved Order Red Men of Maryland, who were responsible for the presentation this afternoon of a limousine ambulance to the base hospital here. The ambulance is one of nineteen thus far presented in this country by the Red Men. The members of the order in Maryland, however, have the pleasure of knowing that in the country they stood third among the States, California and New York winning out. The number of Red Men in Maryland is small compared to membership in many of the other States." Princess Anne Red Men are proud of the good work the order is doing.

Last Saturday morning while Mr. E. O. Smith was at the barber shop someone entered his store and robbed the money drawer. The thief entered the store through a back window after removing the window screen. After taking the small change, about $1.50, from the drawer the person unlocked the back door and departed leaving the door open. A box containing quite a sum of money was on Mr. Smith's desk which was overlooked by the thief.

His body was recovered and taken to his home. He was married only a few months ago to Miss Lucille Long, of Fruitland, and was a brother of Mrs. Curtis W. Long, of Salisbury.

DISEASE FACTOR MOST IMPORTANT

WORMS CAUSE MUCH TROUBLE

Those Who Are Careful About Selection, Feed Well and Provide Sanitary Quarters Suffer Only Small Losses.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Of the difficulties encountered in sheep raising in New England it is believed that the disease factor is the most important. Some growers have but little trouble in this respect, especially those who are careful about selection, feed well, provide sanitary quarters and keep their flocks in the prime of condition throughout the season, while others report large losses, at times as high as 50 per cent of their entire flocks.

Stomach worms, grub in the head, nodular disease of the intestines, and indigestion are the troubles most frequently reported in New England and seem to be the ones to which most loss is due. Skin diseases and ticks are also important and give considerable trouble unless regular dipping is practiced.

Flocks Degenerating.

Much complaint is heard of flocks running out or degenerating, and many breeders say that they have to sell out and start their flocks anew at intervals of every eight or ten years. It is believed that a great deal of the running out of flocks is due as much to worm trouble, which is not recognized as such in many cases, as to anything else. A change of pasture at intervals of every ten days or two weeks is recommended as a safeguard against worm trouble, though this is not always practicable as New England pastures are located. It is likely that much more could be done in combating this disease by making more extensive use of aftermaths and forage crops in supplementing the regular pastures. As prevention of infection is the most practical means of handling this trouble, it is important that the breeder inform himself of the method outlined in Farmers' Bulletin 840 in order to be better enabled to cope with it.

Changing Pastures.

A few growers, who already have regular pastures so located as to permit shifting, recognize the advantages of changing pasture and make a practice of changing their flocks from one pasture to another, and sometimes to a third, during the same season, and though in most cases they can give no good reason for their success, they claim to get better results by so doing. Since the length of time on each pasture is much greater than two weeks (the maximum time a pasture can be occupied and insure safety from infection) it is likely that the advantage gained in this respect is due to the better feed afforded rather than to the prevention of worms, yet the practice is a good one and should be more generally followed.

Most of the so-called running out not due to disease can be attributed to poor care and to degeneration as a result of long-continued inbreeding. Inbreeding to any great extent should be avoided and new blood introduced occasionally in order to maintain vigor and vitality.

The disease factor is one which can hardly be overemphasized. It appears to be one of the most important factors, probably much more so at present than the dog question, in the development and profitableness of the sheep industry of New England.

CONSUME MORE WOOL IN MAY

Monthly Report Issued by Bureau of Markets Places Consumption at 74,600,000 Pounds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

More wool was used by manufacturers in May than in any other month of this year, according to the monthly wool consumption report just issued by the bureau of markets. May consumption was 74,600,000 pounds, grease equivalent, compared to 70,700,000 pounds in April, 71,900,000 in March, 68,700,000 in February, and 65,100,000 pounds in January.

FARM POULTRY

PROPER HANDLING OF EGGS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Millions of eggs produced in this country feed no one. The natural question is, Why? And the answer is that they are carelessly handled, poorly packed in improperly constructed cases, badly stored in freight cars, or allowed to become warm on their journey from the hen's nest to the home. Prevent this enormous loss of valuable food and loss of profits. Take every possible precaution to keep eggs fresh and wholesome, as they are when

A stale egg pleases no one. Heat is the egg's enemy; cold is its friend. Precooling eggs before shipping them, therefore, saves food material. It checks the development of "blood-rings," which occur in fertile eggs subject to incubating temperature (68 degrees or higher). It prevents "addled" eggs, the term applied to eggs when the membrane between the yolk and the white breaks, allowing the two to become mixed. When the eggs are warm this delicate membrane becomes soft, in which condition it is more liable to break by jars which are unavoidable in transportation. Chilling makes the eggs stiff and jellylike, and cold eggs ride best. Precooling retards evaporation, the cause of shrunken eggs. Eggs just laid are full, but 65 per cent of their contents is water. As this water evaporates, the quality of the eggs is reduced. Warm temperatures aid evaporation. Precooling helps to make a uniform product, and this is a day of standardization. A weak spot in the egg trade is the lack of uniformity or standardization for its product. If each case of eggs received at the market was exactly like the last one, the shipper could establish a reputation for uniformity.

Eggs to be shipped should be well packed in clean, standard egg cases. They should be kept under refrigeration and sent to market in properly iced refrigerator cars which retain their good quality. Refrigeration during transit maintains quality, weight, fresh appearance and food value. It retards loss of quality, shrinkage, "blood-rings" and loss of food value.

SCALY LEG CAUSED BY MITE

Kerosene Oil Can Be Used for Eradication—Cattle or Sheep Dip Also Is Favored.

Scaly leg in chickens is caused by a small mite that gets underneath the scale and causes swelling. Kerosene oil can be used to kill this, although the oil irritates some. If you have any cattle or sheep dip, put two or three tablespoonfuls of this in a shallow, two-quart pan and soak the affected feet and legs in this for a minute once a day for two or three days, says Prof. H. E. Embleton of the department of poultry husbandry at Oklahoma A. and M. college, Stillwater.

TURKEYS ON AVERAGE FARM

Abundance of Feed Will Be Picked Up by Fowls During the Summer and Early Fall.

During the summer and early fall turkeys can find an abundance of feed on the average farm. About October 1 it is advisable to begin fattening them for the market, giving only a little feed at first and gradually increasing this until the birds are marketed. The marketing season for turkeys is very short, running only from the middle of November to the latter part of December.

Most Attractive Coop.

A coop of fowls of uniform size and color is more attractive and will bring a better price than an uneven lot, and the same can be said of an evenly colored lot of eggs.

WHEREAS, AT THE JANUARY SESSION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF MARYLAND, HELD IN THE YEAR 1918, A BILL WAS PASSED, TO WIT: CHAPTER 20 OF SAID ACTS, PROPOSING AN ADDITIONAL SECTION TO ARTICLE 1 OF THE CONSTITUTION OF MARYLAND, TO BE KNOWN AS SECTION 1A AND RELATING TO ABSENT VOTING, AND WHICH SAID BILL IS IN THE WORDS AND FIGURES FOLLOWING:

(The Great Seal of Maryland.)

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State of Maryland. Done at the City of Annapolis this twentieth day of July, nineteen hundred and eighteen.

EMERSON C. HARRINGTON,
By the Governor:
THOMAS W. SIMMONS,
Secretary of State.

Epidemic Record of 1917.

Disease scourges took a great toll in the orient during 1917. Cholera prevailed in southern Asia from Asiatic Turkey to the Philippines, striking down 55,000 in the Indian region; there were 8,870 cases in the Philippines and many deaths in Burmah. Bubonic plague belted the tropical world from Peru to Hawaii and New Caledonia. In British India the largest mortality took place; there were 590,000 cases, with 360,000 deaths. The disease area extended as far north as Egypt and Senegal. Yellow fever appeared in Africa, Mexico and South America. The deaths were not above several hundred.

Surely Has "Done His Bit."

"I think this man is doing his bit," writes an army correspondent who sends the following dispatch to the Army and Navy Journal:

"George Borden, a negro, of Goldsboro, N. C., has furnished sons to the war in the sum of nearly two squads. He is the father of 35 children, 27 of them living and 14 of them in the United States army either in this country or in France.

"He has been married three times and on four occasions has been the father of quadruplets."

Many Feeble-Minded.

A complete census of the feeble-minded in the United States has never been taken, but it is estimated that there is one feeble-minded person to every 250 of the population, or approximately 400,000 in all, according to the secretary of one of the New York mental hygiene organizations. About 12,000 men have been rejected from the new national army on account of nervous and mental disorders; and one-third of these were rejected on account of feeble-mindedness.

Daily Thought.

It is to hope, though hope were lost.—Mrs. Barbauld.

Many Have Felt the Same Way.

Nothing is to be said in commendation of the spirit of the man who recently advertised in a London newspaper: "Loud, second-hand gramophone, wanted for reprisals." Many people, however, not only in London but in many other towns the world over, are only too familiar with the circumstances which provoked this vengeful and mistaken determination. Such circumstances certainly constitute one of the things which will need to be "seen to" sooner or later.

House Sparrow in England.

In the course of a campaign in England against the swarming and mischievous house sparrow the services of children and "sparrow clubs" were solicited. Bad results were the consequence, since little discrimination was used, and every sort of small bird was mistaken for the proscribed sparrow, and thousands of useful insect eating birds were destroyed, so that exactly the opposite of what was intended was accomplished.

Use of Orange Oil.

Unadulterated orange oil has a strong aroma and is used in the making of perfumes, essences, soaps and beverage flavors as well as of cakes and confectionery. The principal use for Jamaica orange oil is in the manufacture of fancy biscuits, particularly of a wafer biscuit which is used extensively with ices and iced drinks.—Gas Logic.

Old and True Expression.

The origin of the expression: "In union there is strength," is not known, but the sentiment in various forms has been current a very long time. A Latin author of ancient time said: "By union the smallest states thrive, by discord the greatest are destroyed." The American author of "The Flag of Our Union," said: "United we stand; divided we fall."

No Snap.

"Life is not merely tranquilly drawing one's breath," says the London Telegraph. Bet your boots it isn't! It's hustling like the dickens so that one can draw a few dollars at the end of the week to meet one's expense.—Boston Transcript.

Settling an Oriental Strike.

The dispute between labor and capital ended on Monday, and all weaving sheds are expected to work fully from Tuesday. This ending was hastened by the vow taken by Mr. Gandhi to abstain from food till settlement was reached.—From the Times of India.

SAW SOME GOOD IN GERMANS

Mark Twain Would Not Admit That All Manhood in the Land of the Hun Was Dead.

Probably no other foreigner has ever been so popular in Germany as the American philosopher, Mark Twain; yet Mark understood his Germany, just as he understood Russia, although of the czar's dominions he had only the tripper's knowledge he picked up with the shipload of pre-Cook's tourists that he immortalized in "Innocents Abroad."

In his "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," Twain wrote:

"There it was, you see. A man is a man, at bottom. Whole ages of abuse and oppression cannot crush the manhood clear out of him. Whoever thinks it a mistake is himself mistaken. Yes, there is plenty of good enough material for a republic in the most degraded people that ever existed—even the Russians; plenty of manhood in them—even the Germans—if one could but force it out of its timid and suspicious privacy; to overthrow and trample in the mud any throne that ever was set up and any nobility that ever supported it. We should see certain things yet, let us hope and believe. First, a modified monarchy, till Arthur's days were done, then the destruction of the throne, nobility abolished, every member of it bound out to some useful trade, universal suffrage instituted, and the whole government placed in the hands of men and women of the nation, there to remain. Yes, there was no occasion to give up my dream yet a while."

COAL PYRITE IN EXPLOSIVES

Iowa Geologists Investigate Coal Fields for Needed Mineral, With Excellent Results.

An investigation of pyrite, an essential material in the manufacture of high explosives, is being made in the coal fields of Iowa under the direction of Dean George F. Kay of the University of Iowa, who is director of the Iowa geological survey. High explosives are made with the aid of sulphuric acid, which in turn is made chiefly by roasting pyrite, popularly known as "fool's gold." Hence the mineral is in great demand.

For many years pyrite for acid production has been imported from Spain, states Doctor Kay. But in order to save the ships for more urgent uses, the shipping board has sharply reduced the import of pyrite. The domestic production of the mineral must then be unusually large, he declares.

New York, Virginia, Georgia, South Carolina and Alabama have pyrite mines, and Illinois and several other states are producing a small tonnage from coal mines. Many hundred thousand tons are quickly available from coal mines, says the state geologist, if the government's explosive program requires it.

The method of preparing coal pyrite for shipment to acid plants is simple and cheap. The "sulphur balls" must be separated from adhering coal, and be crushed, washed and screened into lump and fine sizes. Coal miners are willing to load pyrite, and the operators to hoist and ship it, if war industries demand it.

Just One More Question.

"Do you happen to be going far, sir?" said the inquisitive traveler to the man in the corner, after having reduced everyone else in the compartment to silent frenzy.

"Oh, no, only to Scotland," replied the other, sarcastically. "I am a commercial traveler. My age is forty-six. I am married. My name is Thomas Brown. I have a son of nineteen. He is in the Blankshire Buffs. My father died last July. He was on the stock exchange. My mother is still living. I have a niece with red hair. Our charlady's name is Jane Briggs. Is there anything else."

The inquisitive man hesitated.

"What oil do you use for your tongue?" he inquired slowly.—London Times.

An Awful Disease.

A friend of mine in one of the camps is a corporal. The occupants of the barracks across the road had been in quarantine for measles. Occasionally one of the men was moved to the hospital. My friend was stricken with a severe case of tonsilitis and one morning the ambulance stopped to take him to the base hospital.

As he entered the ambulance one soldier said, "Has he got the measles?"

A second one, "No, he's a corporal."

Verbal.

"It was a quiet Fourth."

"Decidedly."

"I don't think I heard a single explosion all day."

"I heard one."

"Cannon cracker?"

"No. I passed a motorist who had just had a breakdown. He was addressing a few remarks to his car."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Hash.

War has not changed the American darkey. A dusky cook of an American regiment now in France was being quizzed by an officer about the cleanliness of that free-for-all army product known as hash.

"How do you make your hash?" dutifully inquired the officer.

"We don't make it, boss," was the answer. "It just accumulates."

GOOD HANDLING SAVES EGGS

Big Loss Can Be Prevented If Producer and Country Merchant Take Precautions.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Not long ago four men worked half a day grading "current receipts" of eggs as they were received at a city market. They candled out one hundred dollars worth of rots, spots, and incubated eggs. This loss could so easily have been prevented if only the producer and the country merchant had handled the eggs promptly.

The hen lays a fresh egg; the consumer demands a fresh egg. Eggs are a highly perishable product, and gradually deteriorate with age. Heat is their enemy; cold is their friend. The shorter the time and the more direct their route from nest to packing house, the smaller the opportunity for loss.

The proper handling of eggs is not a one-man job. Many people are concerned in it. Their interests are common, and mutual understanding and co-operation between them benefit all alike.

The farmer's part in the general scheme of good marketing is to bring good eggs to market. To accomplish this, he should market his eggs frequently, not let them accumulate.

The dealer's job is to keep the eggs good. His slogan should be "ship promptly and properly." The sooner an egg is put under refrigeration and started for the market, the better its quality when it reaches its final destination, and the higher its value.

KEEPING CHICKENS IN TOWN

One of Best Ways for Loyal American to Help Win War Is to Raise Hens in Back Yard.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Every true American is asking, "How can I best do my part to help win the war?" One of the means to this end is to set the back yard to work. Those who have suitable land are cultivating vegetable gardens to help increase the food supply. There are, however, many back yards not suitable for the making of a garden which may be profitably utilized for back yard poultry keeping. In every household, no matter how economical the housewife, there is a certain amount of table scraps and kitchen waste which has feeding value, but which, if not fed, finds its way into the garbage pail. Poultry is the only class of domestic animals which is suitable for converting this waste material, right where it is produced in the city, into wholesome and nutritious food in the form of eggs and poultry meat. A small number of chickens can be kept in almost any back yard.

piano boxes or other large packing cases. Their eggs should make a substantial addition to the family food supply. Each hen in her pullet year should produce ten dozen eggs. The average size of the back yard flock should be at least ten hens. Thus each flock would produce in a year 100 dozen eggs, which at the conservative value of 25 cents a dozen would be worth $25. By keeping a back yard poultry flock the family would not only help in reducing the cost of living, but would have eggs of a quality and freshness which are often difficult to obtain.

Poultry keeping, although a comparatively simple undertaking, will be successful in direct proportion to the study and labor which are expended upon it. There is an abundance of good material on the subject, but "Back Yard Poultry Keeping" (Farmers' Bulletin 889), a recent publication of the United States department of agriculture, contains all the general directions needed to make a start. It tells how to overcome the objections to keeping poultry in the city, what kinds of fowls to keep, the size of the flock computed according to the size of the back yard, gives definite instructions as to the best kinds of chicken houses to build, with bill of materials for same, directions as to feeding the fowls, hatching and raising chicks, prevention of diseases and pests, and many other matters essential to the success of the undertaking. Another helpful bulletin of a general character is "Hints to Poultry Raisers" (Farmers' Bulletin 528). This gives a great deal of useful and authoritative information within a very small compass.

"It's the Buttermilk"

That's what growing chicks need to get the right start. It's what you need to raise all you hatch. The lactic acid in the buttermilk strengthens the sensitive digestive organs, the combination of clean, wholesome grains, balanced just right for baby chicks, helps them grow steadily bigger and sturdier.

FIREARMS ARE NOT FRAGILE

Shotgun Properly Cared For Is Said to Be Good for a Hundred Thousand Shots.

A question frequently asked is, "How long will my shotgun last?" or "How many shots can I fire from my rifle or revolver before it wears out?"

It is impossible for anyone to say just how long a firearm will last, because it is impossible to tell beforehand what kind of care it is going to get, and the care it receives makes all the difference between a few hundred shots and a lifetime of faithful service.

Assuming that they are cleaned carefully and consistently a good shotgun will show practically no falling off in pattern or penetration for probably well over 100,000 shots. A 22-caliber rifle and a revolver are both good for 30,000 or 40,000 shots. A high-power rifle is good for about 3,000 to 5,000 shots, usually the higher the velocity the shorter the life of the barrel.

Judging from these facts it would appear that the higher the pressure developed by the explosion the more wear on the barrel, for the shotgun develops the least pressure and the high-power rifle the most.

A rather interesting sidelight on this question of barrel life is a determination of the actual length of time to which a good shotgun barrel is subjected to the force and burning effect of the powder charge during its lifetime. If 100,000 shots are fired from a shotgun the inside of the barrel is actually exposed to the flame of the powder charge for about four minutes.

USE OF LARGER IMPLEMENTS AND MORE HORSES HELP TO SOLVE LABOR PROBLEM

Examples of Methods Which Save Man Power—One Man Operating Tractor Drawing Three Plows and Another With a Four-Mule Team Operating Large Harrow.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If two men, driving one horse each, can combine the two horses into one team which one man can drive, and this team can do as much or more work than two did singly, isn't it wise to combine them and save one man's time?

And if the farm is large and conditions warrant, isn't it wise to combine two of these two-horse teams into one, and save another man's time?

Work which is generally done in some parts of the country with the aid of machines that greatly increase the efficiency of the men employed is still largely done by hand in other parts. Machinery for most of the work in connection with preparing and tilling the soil is available in many sizes, and frequently two or more outfits, each requiring the time of one man, are seen working in the same field on operations for which implements of two or three times the size of those used could be employed with just as satisfactory results. There are few farm horses which a driver of ordinary intelligence cannot train to work in large teams in a few days' time, and most of the larger implements are little if any more complicated or difficult to handle than the small ones for the same work.

Installation of Machinery.

Where the farm is large, and it is not possible to procure sufficient labor, it will certainly be more profitable, as well as patriotic, to install machinery which will enable the operator to plant, cultivate and harvest a full acreage of the crops best suited to his land and the needs of the country, than to let some of the land lie idle or, at best, have it prepared and worked poorly, and the crops out of season.

In many cases, a worker can double the work done by the use of a larger implement and a correspondingly greater amount of motive power, and sometimes the gain is considerably more than this. If the nature of the work and the machinery for doing it are such that the best implements will increase the efficiency of the worker by only 50 or even 25 per cent, their use may make possible an increase in acreage by just that amount, and at least will enable the farmer to do his work in less time and allow him to take advantage of good weather if the season is unfavorable.

Buy Larger Machinery.

Can all farmers afford to buy extra horses and larger implements to save man labor? Of course, those whose farms require but one or two horses to do the ordinary work can seldom afford to do so. But such can secure this additional help by combining to purchase larger machinery and doubling up their teams to operate it; or one, usually more skilled in operating machinery, or better able to purchase it, may own the larger implements, and do the work for several neighbor farmers, besides his own, to the advantage of all concerned. Both these methods have been tried out in many localities with mowers, harvesters, tractors, threshing machines and other farm machinery.

KEEP SHEEP FLOCK TO CONTROL WEEDS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the best and cheapest ways to control weeds on farms is to keep a flock of sheep. In addition to controlling weeds without cost, sheep will render a profit by producing nutritious food and wool, and will assist materially in meeting demands on the nation for meat and wool production. If weeds are not permitted to grow and develop leaves they will die, but it would require a great amount of hard labor to keep most weeds under control by this method. Sheep will keep the weeds down and the more weeds they eat the less will be their cost of upkeep, and the greater will be the supply of food released for other stock. Many rough or permanent grass pastures that require mowing can be kept clean by the use of sheep, while at the same time the cattle-carrying capacity of the pasture is increased.

HOW TO SHIP NEW POTATOES

Prevent Losses by Loading Them Carefully Into Cars—Double-Headed Barrel Is Good.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Shifting of the loads in transit, weak and partly filled packages, and lack of ventilation are responsible for losses in many cars of new potatoes which are arriving at markets. The loading of diseased potatoes is also responsible for considerable loss. In some cases shipments that show scab wilt or late blight are practically worthless when they reach the market.

The double-headed barrel appears to be the best package for new potatoes that is now in general use. If properly made it protects the potatoes as well as holds them in place. Much less breakage has been found in cars where the barrels are loaded on end than when loaded on their bilge. Strips should be placed on top of the lower layers of barrels for the upper layers to rest upon.

Loading barrels on their bilge is not a safe practice unless headliners (strips to prevent heads bulging) are used. It is said that the use of headliners would prevent nine-tenths of the breakage in all types of loads with barrels. Extra bracing is needed when barrels are loaded on their bilge.

The sack is not a suitable container for tender new potatoes; it offers no protection from bruising, and when loaded is hard to ventilate. If sacks are to be used they should be of no greater capacity than 100 pounds. The smaller sack could be handled with much greater care and would lend itself to ventilation better.

Hampers are not suitable packages for potatoes. They do not have the necessary strength for the weight of their contents and offer little protection. As long as hampers are used for potatoes and other heavy produce there will be severe loss from breakage. If used they should be loaded on end and alternate baskets inverted. Great care should be taken to make the load tight, and no slack space should be allowed in the car. This will lessen the chance of shifting.

Crates of various sorts are being used, and appear satisfactory where the strength of the crate is sufficient for the weight of its contents. Weak crates should not be used under any circumstances, and crates with wide openings tend to wilt the potatoes while in transit. Crates must be loaded tight and firm, and no slack space left under any circumstances without suitable bracing, while striping is recommended.

NEED OF ANCIENT PRACTICE

History Tells Us That Roman Farmers Stored Various Succulent Feeds for Live Stock.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

History tells of Roman farmers who carefully chopped fine various green, succulent feeds and packed them in pits for use during the winter season. The practice seems to have been common and the feed kept well. From these early times it has been good practice to store various green crops in pits or airtight containers for feeding to stock. The silo is the present-day result, and a farmer who raises live stock cannot afford to be without one. The advantages of the silo are numerous, but some of the more important are:

1. Green, succulent feed is available throughout the year.
2. A silo stores more feed for less cost than any other farm building.
3. The feed is handy for use.

Danger in Tainted Mouth.

Bleeding of the teeth, pyorrhea, involves a debilitating gradual loss of blood, and the flow of pus into the mouth, small though it be, is manifestly neither healthful nor pleasant. Medical science gives a tainted mouth as much cause for rheumatism, anemia, neuritis, ulcers of the stomach, acute kidney diseases, diabetes, heart trouble, deformed joints, irritability and general nervous exhaustion, and even pneumonia germs are found in infected gums.

Art and Heredity.

The musical instinct is very often hereditary—witness the Jews, who have been the most musical race in the world since the days of the Old Testament. It does not, however, follow of necessity that if parents are artistic the children will follow suit, despite the famous reflection of the countryman who remarked that, now Mr. Wordsworth was dead, he supposed his son would carry on the old man's business.

Best Workers Win.

Today it is the man who does the most and best work who wins, whether he is a professional or business man. He prefers to arrive too soon rather than too late.—Exchange.

After they are tied the bundles can be put in a corner ready to sell.

Joke on Editor.

A well-known author, says a New York paragrapher, submitted an article on Zola to a magazine editor. The editor rejected it on the recommendation of one of his assistants, who said it was too pessimistic. He wrote to the author "If you have something else let me have it." The author cut the article into two parts. One he titled "Tolstoy." The other "Balzac." Instead of the works of Zola he substituted the work of Tolstoy and Balzac. The editor accepted both articles.

Pocomoke Circuit Church Notes

Accompanied by the Rev. W. G. Harris, pastor of Cookman M. E. Church, of Wilmington, Del., the Pocomoke Circuit pastor, Rev. Charles A. Vandermuelen, motored to Deal's Island last Thursday for the day. They assisted the Island M. E. Pastor, the Rev. Mr. Outten, in his camp meeting of that evening. Milton Brittingham and Harold Gibbons, Jr., also accompanied the clergymen. The four were guests of the Rev. and Mrs. Outten at the parsonage and at the camp.

The annual Sunday school picnic of Pocomoke Circuit was held very successfully last Wednesday at Public Landing. It is expected that the Cokesbury and Emmanuel Sunday schools will hold, on their church grounds, in the near future, individual school picnic rallies similar to the one so successful at Williams a few weeks ago.

The Rev. C. A. Vandermuelen motored with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Mason to their old home church at Guilford, Va., on Monday afternoon of last week. They attended the afternoon and evening sessions of the August Progressive Conference of the Eastern Shore district of the M. E. Church, South.

Messrs. Edgar Atkinson, Milton and Russel Brittingham, Ernest Bundick and the Rev. Mr. Vandermuelen closed the recent heat-record-breaking Tuesday with a brief visit to Red Hills.

The Archie Taylor family, of Princess Anne, was entertained at the W. V. Taylor home at Cokesbury last Tuesday at supper and for the evening.

William Whitehead and Wallace V. Taylor have been quite ill of late, but at the present writing they are much improved.

The Quinton M. P. Sunday school united with the Pocomoke Circuit schools in a picnic at Public Landing last Wednesday.

Next Sunday's (August 18) preaching services: At Cokesbury, 11 a. m.; Williams, 3.30 p. m., and Emmanuel, 8.30 p. m.

The Rev. W. G. Harris, of Wilmington, Del., is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Gibbons, at Emmanuel.

Perryhawkin

Aug. 10—Miss Emma Gibbons has been confined to her home by illness for 10 days.

Mr. Willis Howard and mother, Mrs. W. T. Howard, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. T. Dykes last week.

Mrs. P. D. West and daughter, Mrs. Della Hawkins, are guests at the home of Mrs. L. E. Deguibert, at Public Landing.

A large number of our people motored to Public Landing on the Synepuxent Bay last Thursday when the Farmers' Day picnic was held. It is supposed 2,000 persons were present.

Don't forget Friday evening, Aug. 16th, is when the convention of Christion Churches of the Eastern Shore will convene at Perryhawkin Christian Church and continue for several days.

The Ladies' Aid of Perryhawkin Christian Church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Alder on Tuesday evening. A large number of members and friends were present and a delightful evening spent.

The tent meeting conducted by Rev. William Vickers, the traveling Evangelist, on the land of Mr. W. A. Riggin, on the road leading from Princess Anne to Whitesburg, is being well attended. Rev. Mr. Hope is assisting in the meetings. The song services are being conducted by Misses Parker and Meyers. of Cumberland, Md.

Cure For Dysentery

"While I was in Ashland, Kansas, a gentleman overheard me speaking of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes William Whitelaw, of Des Moines, Iowa. "He told me in detail of what it had done for his family, but more especially his daughter who was lying at the point of death with a violent attack of dysentery, and had been given up by the family physician. Some of his neighbors advised him to give Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy, which he did, and fully believes that by doing so saved the life of his child. He stated that he had also used this remedy himself with equally gratifying results."

Westover

Aug. 8—Rev. J. W. Wootten is on his vacation, consequently there were no services last Sunday at the M. E. Church.

Several "overseas" letters were received from Corporal Guy Jones, Wagoners Thurston Dryden, Elsworth Dryden and Levin Adams. The boys write enthusiastically of their work and the kindliness of the French people. By chance Levin Adams, who had been "over there" several weeks, saw Guy Jones on a troop train a few days after he landed. Both boys enjoyed the meeting.

At a meeting of Westover Auxiliary, American Red Cross, it was arranged to serve a "War Supper" Thursday, August 15th. As fried chicken and sea foods are allowed by the Food Commission the supper will not differ greatly from the usual bountiful spreads served by the Westover ladies. Every one should take this opportunity to do their bit for the Red Cross work. Mesdames E. Dennett Long, George Jones, W. C. Ford, Messrs. James Rue, N. J. Brittingham, George Jones and J. W. Meat Exports Soaring

The extent to which aid is being furnished the Allied nations in foodstuffs is indicated in a statement issued by the Food Administration showing that during June exports of beef from the United States totaled 92,173,000 pounds, of which 95 per cent. went to the United Kingdom, France, England and Belgium. The monthly average of beef exports for the three years preceding the war was 1,066,000 pounds. Pork exports for June amounted to 169,331,000 pounds, of which 83.5 per cent went to the four allies. The monthly average before the war was 41,531,567 pounds of pork.

May Take Over Packers

Government acquisition and control of all the principal stockyards, cold storage plants and warehouses and both refrigerator and cattle cars has been recommended to the President by the Federal Trade Commission to destroy a monopoly which it declares Swift & Co., Armour & Co., Morris & Co., Wilson & Co., Inc., and the Cudahy Packing Company exercises not only over the meat industry of the country but other necessary food supplies.

It has long been the dream of the manufacturer to secure a material which, while light in weight, would yet be adaptable for the purposes of fine tailoring. And Palm Beach fills the bill.

THE GREAT SALISBURY FAIR

—WILL OPEN—

Tuesday, Aug. 20th, 1918

and continue for four consecutive days including FRIDAY, AUGUST 23d

YES, the day will soon be here when the Great Salisbury Fair will again apen its gates to the thousands who annually visit its grounds to see its magnificent program of free entertainment, hotly contested races, its well arranged midway filled with the best attractions; its motorcycle contests famed for years, or the thrilling bursts of speed made on this, the fastest and best track in this section of the country. Those who for many years have made a custom of attending the Great Salisbury Fair well know that they will find there enough to amuse and interest.

These are war times, and every true American citizen is vitally interested in gaining the great contest, and one of the most essential and important things in doing this is the success of this country in providing enough grain and food to feed both ourselves and our noble allies. The management of the Great Salisbury Fair hopes that the meet this year will do much towards helping our farmers, our truckers and our stockraisers in producing more and better grain and stock. A special effort is being made to have our competitive agricultural exhibit complete and of the highest standard. Those who have prize material in their gardens, on their farms, in their poultry yards, or stock barns, are earnestly solicited to forward at once an entry of these to the Secretary of the Fair, so that by their co-operation we may make this exhibit of a character that cannot fail to interest our people in raising better crops and stock. The management has striven this year to place before its patrons an even better class of attractions than ever before. It is impossible in a limited space to list in full the many features of this fair; some of the leading ones are as follows:

FRENCH EXPERTS

This is one of the free attractions, and one that is well worth seeing. It is a novelty performed high in the air, and one which has won for the Three Alex a reputation of country-wide fame. By skillful manoeuvering of poles by one member the others are held high, performing wonderful and sensational tricks.

McDONALD TRIO

LEDEGAR or THE FLYING DUTCHMAN

RACING

There has never been a year in the history of this Fair when the outlook for good horses and spirited racing was better than now. Inquiries for racing blanks have been received from far-off Michigan even. Those who love a horse and enjoy hotly-contested trotting and pacing races can feel assured that they this year will have as great a treat as they have enjoyed for some time.

MOTORCYCLE RACING

There is nothing that runs on the "good old earth" at such a tremendous rate of speed as a motorcycle. The way that they whirl around a track, taking the curves, is enough to make the most hardened men and women hold their breath, waiting for the spill which every moment seems certain, but which the great skill of these trained riders always succeed in avoiding. We have recognized the great interest that these Motorcycle races create, and have each year devoted more and more of our time and money to making them the best that could be obtained. This year, unusually interesting races have been arranged, and it is prohesied that some of the racers will make record-breaking time on the track.

MIDWAY

Following our custom of the past few years, the Midway upon the Great Salisbury Fair grounds will be furnished by a large and responsible booking company of New York City. This company has arranged for a goodly number of the various kinds of shows usually seen on a Midway. These shows will be amusing, interesting and decent.

Despite war times, bringing with it an increased cost of running everything, the price of admission at the Fair will not be increased but remain as it has been for years, as follows: 25 cents on Tuesday and Friday, and 50 cents on Wednesday and Thursday. Tuesday will be "Children's Day," when all children under 12 years will be admitted free. Friday will be better known as "Home Day," when everyone comes and enjoys the GREAT SHOW at the nominal price of 25 cents.

Be sure and attend this year's Fair. You can't fail to enjoy yourself. Come, bring your families, your friends and your neighbors. Remember the dates!

Call For Student Nurse Reserve

The Government is now calling for 25,000 young women to join the United States Student Nurse Reserve and hold themselves in readiness to train for service as nurses. The call is for women between the ages of 19 and 35.

Somerset County Recruiting Station is in Patriotic Headquarters on Main street, Princess Anne, open from 11 to 12 a. m. and 3.30 to 5.30 p. m. every day until September 1.

Intelligent, responsible women of good education and sound health are wanted—the pick of the country. A college education is a valuable asset and many hospitals will give credit for it. Credit will also be given for a special scientific equipment or for preliminary training in nursing, such as that given in special courses now being conducted by various colleges and schools. Some schools, on the other hand, do not even require a full high-school education. Women will be given an opportunity to enroll in the United States Student Nurse Reserve in any one of three ways:

1. As engaging to hold themselves in readiness until April 1, 1919, to accept assignments to nurses' training schools in civilian hospitals. These women will be sent to the schools as fast as vacancies occur. Those of superior qualifications will be given preference, and it is, of course, possible that not every one who enrolls will be accepted.

2. As desiring to become candidates for the Army Nursing School recently established by authority of the War Department, with branch schools in selected military hospitals.

3. As engaging to hold themselves in readiness until April 1, 1919, to accept assignments to either a civilian training school or the Army Nursing School. Those who so enroll will be called where the first need arises. The Government hopes that a majority of those who enroll will thus put down their names for both.

Burial Of Thomas J. Lambdon

The funeral services of Mr. Thomas J. Lambdon were held at his late home in East Princess Anne, last Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Leolan Jackson, pastor of Antioch Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Lambdon died at an early hour Monday morning of last week, aged 74 years.

He is survived by his widow (Mrs. Jennie Lambdon), four sons, (Messrs. Barney Lambdon, of Camden, N. J.; Clifford Lambdon, of Pennsgrove, N. J.; Dulaney Lambdon, of Westmont, N. J.; Jefferson Lambdon, of Princess Anne), and one daughter (Mrs. Annie Wheatley, of Princess Anne.)

The interment was in Manokin Presbyterian Church cemetery. The pallbearers were: Messrs. Geo. W. Brown, George W. Colborn, Sr., J. Sidney Hayman, Z. W. Townsend, Chas. S. Dryden and Thomas H. Heath.

Somerset Gunners Take Notice

As was published in this paper last week, the Federal regulations on game take precedence over the State laws, and for this reason the dove season does not open in Maryland until September instead of August 15th, as provided in the State Game Law. Also it will be well for sportsmen to understand that it is a violation of the Federal laws to shoot Summer or Wood ducks, the season on such ducks being closed until September 1st, 1920. Then, too, from the warning it will be seen that it will be well for gunners to take out licenses before attempting to gun, as the State Game Warden has notified all deputies to arrest persons found gunning who cannot produce licenses for the year 1918.

TANKER SUNK NEAR NEW YORK

Seven Men Lost When Oil Ship Kellogg Is Torpedoed

Seven men were killed by the explosion of a torpedo when the American oil tanker Frederick R. Kellogg was sunk by a German submarine south of Ambrose lightship, near the entrance to New York Bay, according to reports of survivors who arrived at New York City last Wednesday.

Thirty-five members of the crew reached there safely. They were picked up 30 miles south of Ambrose Light at 9.56 o'clock Tuesday night, after they had been adrift in life-boats three and one-half hours.

Originally the crew consisted of 42 men, commanded by Capt. C. W. White. The seven who were killed were on watch in the engine-room when the German torpedo crashed through the vessel's side.

The survivors declared the submarine attacked at 6.10 o'clock Tuesday night, while most of the crew were at dinner. The torpedo struck on the port side aft and the vessel immediately began to settle. The crew rushed on deck, entered the two life-boats and put off. After the boats got away a steward, who had been below deck, appeared on deck just before the ship sank and plunged overboard, reaching a lifeboat in safety. According to the survivors, none saw the wake of the torpedo or the submarine.

Ambrose Light, near the scene of this U-boat attack, marks one of the approaches to New York harbor. German submarines have never before been known to venture so close to the harbor. This sinking occurred at a spot where many patrol boats pass daily, and within the zone patrolled by naval airplanes.

The Frederick R. Kellogg was owned by the American Petroleum and Transportation Company, of Los Angeles, Cal. She was launched a year ago at Oakland, Cal., and was of more than 7,000 tons. The Kellogg is one of the biggest steamers caught by the submarines since they started raiding the American Coast in May. The submarine which attacked it is probably the same one that sank the Norwegian steamer Sommerstad off Fire Island Monday of last week.

Tomato Canning Regulations

Complaints have come to the office of Charles C. Gelder, Federal Food Administrator of Somerset county, of disagreements in the purchase and sale of tomatoes. As these matters are fully covered by the regulations of the United States Food Administration, and that each party to a transaction may be fully advised, he gives the following information:

Special License Regulations No. 7, Rule 9—Licensee must not buy commodities already sold. No licensee shall buy or contract to buy any of the vegetables or fish for the above mentioned products (canned goods) if he has a reason to believe that the seller has already contracted to sell the said materials to other persons. In buying vegetables or fish for such products he shall require the seller to state in writing, in the contract or otherwise, that he has not contracted to sell said vegetables or fish to others.

Canned Goods Bulletin No. 10—Tins to be well-filled with sound, ripe fruit, well-peeled and cored, and of good body and flavor.

Therefore, a canner is not permitted to pack, neither is he obliged to purchase unripe or unsound fruit.

Growers should care for, pack and deliver fruit according to the above specifications.

William Omar Pusey Dead

The remains of Mr. William Omar Pusey, who died in Philadelphia, were brought to Princess Anne early last Tuesday morning and funeral services were held that morning at 10.30 o'clock at the home of his sister, Mrs. William H. Powell, on Beckford avenue, conducted by the Rev. Leolan Jackson, pastor of Antioch Methodist Episcopal Church. The interment was in Palmetto cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs. Austin Pusey, G. Norman Pusey, Elwood Pusey, Ernest Hayman, Harcourt Pusey and W. A. Brown.

Mr. Pusey was a son of the late Allison T. Pusey, of East Princess Anne district, and is survived by his widow and one son, G. Omar Pusey. He is also survived by one brother, (Mr. D. C. Pusey, of Philadelphia,) and five sisters, (Mrs. Wm. H. Powell and Mrs. E. Mace Smith, of Princess Anne; Mrs. Charles F. Pusey, of Delmar, Del.; Mrs. Wm. T. Brumley and Miss Martha Pusey, of Salisbury.)

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Morris, who have been visiting at the home of Mr. Morris' father, Mr. John W. Morris, have returned to Alameda, California. Mr. Morris holds a responsible position with the Maryland Casualty Company, with headquarters in San Francisco.

DRAFT REGISTRATION WILL BE HELD ON SATURDAY, AUGUST 24

One Hundred And Six Men Called To Camp—73 White And 33 Colored Registrants To Be Sent From Somerset County

The Local Board for Somerset county was notified on Wednesday of last week, by telegram received from Adjutant General Warfield, that there would be an intermediate registration under the draft law on Saturday, August 24th, 1918, from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. The registration will be conducted at the same places as was the registration on June 5th. The people in the upper part of the county can register at the office of the Local Board. in the court house at Princess Anne; in the lower part of the county the registration will be held at the store of Mr. W. Jerome Sterling in Crisfield; on Smith's Island registration will be held at the store of Mr. William H. Bradshaw, and the people in Deal's Island, Tangier and Dames Quarter districts can register at the Deal's Island Bank.

All persons who have become 21 years of age since the 5th day of June, 1918, and on or before the 24th day of August, 1918, are required to register. This registration should not be confused with the registration to be held in September, under the bill now pending in Congress, providing for a registration of all persons between the ages of 18 and 45. It is absolutely necessary that all persons who have become 21 years of age since June 5th last should register, and failure to do so will be severely punished.

During the past week the Local Board has received calls for white and colored registrants to be sent to camp during the present month. The two calls aggregate 106 men. The colored men will report to the Local Board next Thursday, August 22nd, at 4 p. m., to entrain for Camp Dix the following morning. This call is for 33 colored registrants who have been accepted for general military service.

The number of white men called is seventy-three. They will entrain for Camp Meade about Tuesday, August 27th. This includes practically all of the 1918 registrants, as well as the 1917 registrants who have been accepted for general military service.

In view of the urgent necessity for farm labor at the present time the Local Board tried to secure a further deferment of the call to service of the 1917 registrants who have been engaged in farming, but Adjutant General Warfield advised the Local Board that all of the 1917 registrants who had been deferred on farming claims, should be inducted and entrained before the 1918 registrants were called.

2,500,000 Men In U. S. Army Forces

The draft program and plans of the War Department are of such a character that the rapid movement of troops to France is continuing, Secretary Baker said last Thursday, and by reason of the very great assistance given by the British government in placing so much shipping at the disposal of the American government the Department hopes to continue the accelerated movement overseas.

There now are approximately 2,600,000 American soldiers in this country and overseas, Mr. Baker added. The reserve in the United States is such that even with the exhausting for a time of the eligibles in Class 1 the movement of men overseas would not be interrupted.

Fourteen National Army divisions already are in France, the secretary said, and there have been included in the new field army organization recently announced by General Pershing. There are also 12 National Guard divisions, including the Rainbow organization, overseas, together with five regular army divisions.

Potato Crop Third Short

The Irish potato crop of the Eastern Shore of Virginia is practically marketed. The yield fell short of last year's by a third, due partly to less acreage, but largely to the heavy rain of April, when hundreds of acres were under water for several days. The Eastern Shore of Virginia Produce Exchange has shipped 5,000 cars against 8,000 of last year. The price has ranged from $4 to $6 per barrel, averaging $5. The crop was harvested with less trouble than was anticipated, but all other work on the shore has been disorganized.

Takes Over Air Mail

Considering that the air mail service is no longer an experiment, the Postoffice Department Monday of last week assumed control of the New York-Philadelphia-Wilmington routes as the first step in plans for the establishment of nation-wide aeroplane mail. Heretofore the service has been maintained by the War Department.

Six new planes which the Department purchased were placed in service with christening ceremonies Monday at College Field, Md.

PLANS FOR FOURTH LIBERTY LOAN

County Chairmen Hold Conference And Hear Of New System

The county chairmen of the Maryland Liberty Loan Committee held a very interesting and harmonious conference at the Hotel Belvedere, Baltimore, last Wednesday afternoon, 20 counties being represented. The conference followed a luncheon and was presided over by Col. Harry B. Wilcox, the general chairman of the state committee. The conference was called to discuss plans for the conduct of the Fourth Liberty Loan Campaign, which begins September 28.

The one idea predominating all others is to float this Fourth Liberty Loan in the quickest possible way at the smallest possible cost.

Heretofore the spectacular features introduced in the Liberty Loan Campaigns has called for too great an outlay of money. It is contended that under the individual allotment plan the desired result can be attained at a great saving of cost and also of time.

The individual allotment system consists of ascertaining the income and the financial standing of every person in the community, so that some idea may be obtained as to the amount of Liberty Bonds he is able to purchase. Accordingly, each person will be asked to subscribe to the amount set forth by the Liberty Loan Committee, and which amount will be stipulated only after a careful investigation.

The apportionment or allotment will be made upon a basis of property value ascertained by court record, or, rather, the individual's known financial ability to carry the amount of the allotment, which is to be made by the Liberty Loan Committee and not by the bankers of the country, as was recently intimated by some.

While the campaign is not to begin until September 28, it is the purpose of the state committee that the foundation work for the floating of the fourth issue shall proceed at once with all speed to the end that within the allotted time, three weeks, the loan may not only be floated, but oversubscribed.

A special effort will be made among the farmers and laboring masses throughout the country to not only themselves subscribe, but to make personal appeals to others. Under the system, it is suggested a man will be advised of the amount of bonds allotted to him and given one opportunity to avail himself of the portion intended for him.

Call For All 21 Years Old Since June 5

Registration on Saturday, August 24th, of all youths who have reached the age of 21 since the second registration last June 5 was ordered last Wednesday by Provost Marshal General Crowder under a proclamation by the President.

The purpose is to add quickly to the almost exhausted Class 1 to meet the army draft calls in September.

About 150,000 young men will register. Most of them will qualify for Class 1 and, therefore, probably will join the army within a month after their names are recorded.

It was pointed out at the Provost Marshal General's office that this registration would be entirely distinct from the registration that will be necessary shortly when the draft ages are extended, and it also was announced that the suggested date, September 5, would not be the day for the registration of men from 18 to 45, even if Congress passes the bill in time, because several of the largest States in the Union hold primary elections on that date.

The Provost Marshall has no intention, it was said, of creating registration dates for men reaching 21 throughout the year, but the present registration was made necessary by the approaching deficiency of man-power.

Ward Is a Candidate For Congress

Mr. Augustus Ward, of Crisfield, a prominent Republican of Somerset connty, last Thursday filed his papers with the Supervisors of Election of the nine counties on the Eastern Shore, as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress from the First district of Maryland. Mr. Ward announced some weeks ago that he would be a candidate for the nomination and expected to make an active, energetic campaign in the primaries and general election throughout the district. He was a member of the Maryland Legislature from Somerset in the session of 1914.

The summer session of the Maryland Press Association will be held at Ocean City August 25th, 26th and 27th. It is expected that there will be a large attendance of the Maryland editors at this meeting. A program of entertainment, recreation, constructional discussion and co-operation is being arranged for every editor of a county paper in Maryland.

MARYLAND MUST SEND MORE MEN

The Last Call Is For 3,039 From The State At Large

A call was issued last Tuesday by Provost Marshal General Crowder for 3,039 Marylanders, of which number 1,624 must come from Baltimore city.

This number is in addition to the 6,000 drafted during July for special military service. By September Maryland will have contributed 10,000 men to the service.

The call Tuesday was for white men only, and the draft boards were instructed that before any selections whatsoever were made from the class registered in June, 1918, the class of June, 1917, must be entirely exhausted. The order, in this connection, reads as follows:

"In the selection of men to be inducted under this call, all local boards must send every available man of the class of June, 1917, registration before selection is made from the class of June, 1918, registration. This is the decision of the Provost Marshal General and must be obeyed in all respects."

This means that the young men who came of age between the registrations of June, 1917, and June, 1918, will be exempted from service for as long a period as possible. Whether it will be necessary to draft any of these men in order to make up the quotas of the different districts cannot be foretold. It all depends upon how many available men—that is, men fit in every way for military service—of the first registration remain in each of the districts.

The order further indicates that the men of the first registration who were placed in deferred classes because of having been engaged in agricultural pursuits are now to be called out, for it says:

"Registrants of the class of 1917 engaged in agricultural pursuits, and whose order numbers have been passed over under previous authority, and who now come within the current quota of a local board, must be called, inducted and entrained."

In other words, the whole order indicates an intention upon the part of the War Department to thoroughly comb the class of 1917 before calling any men of the class of 1918.

A bulletin explaining the draft situation as it concerns the men who may be called into service through the bill now pending in Congress, extending the age limits, has been sent by Adjutant General Henry M. Warfield to all the local draft boards and other officials connected with the work of calling the men into service. More registrars will be appointed, owing to the increase in the number of men to be drafted. Just as soon as the new law becomes effective the necessary blanks, forms and specific instructions will be issued.

Farmers Should Save Tomato Seed

Tomato seed will probably be scarce and expensive next season and farmers should save their own seed from the present tomato crop in order to have sufficient seed of a desirable quality for next season's crop.

Tomato seed can be saved with very little expense to the farmer and will be profitable in giving a more desirable type of tomato and increased yields. In saving tomato seed, careful consideration should be given to the plant. Only tomatoes from green, healthy and vigorous plants should be saved. Tomatoes should be selected that show the proper type and are true to variety, uniform, good size, free from disease, sound and from a good cluster of tomatoes, which indicates a good yield and early maturity. Select the most desirable tomatoes that are suitable for the use which is to be made of the crop.

Having selected plants that contain the desired tomatoes, they should be staked and tomatoes should not be picked from these plants until the tomatoes have been removed for seed. Tomatoes that are to be saved for seed should be allowed to fully ripen on the vines and after they become soft, can be picked, crushed and then placed in a barrel or tub of water and washed by stirring. The fleshy part of the tomato will come to the surface of the water and can be removed, the seeds settling to the bottom. The seeds should then be washed and allowed to stand in water several days to ferment, which will remove all parts of the tomato from the seeds. The seeds should then be washed and placed on a screen to dry. After the seeds have been thoroughly dried by the air they should be placed in bags and stored in a dry place.

County Agent C. Z. Keller will assist any farmer in the saving of tomato or other seed.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Heath have received a letter from their son, Marby, of the 115th Infantry, somewhere in France. He said it was the prettiest country he ever saw; the days were hot and the nights were cool.

Exiles of Love

By MATILDA FRANCES PFEIFFER

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

"See what I have brought you to!" said Winnie Thorpe in pretty self-reproach and contrition.

"Yes, it's simply terrible!" amplified her husband, Albion, and he shook his head in a most doleful way and feigned to squeeze a tear from one eye. Then those two bubbling over spirits coalesced in an outburst of mutual joy, love and felicity supreme. There was a hug, a kiss, and Albion started to leave the little three-room cottage they called home.

"I've got to find work of some kind today," he declared. "You are the most economical little housewife ever was, but my store of money has about given out and it's a job or we'll have to live on love exclusively."

"Oh, what sweet things you say!" enthused Winnie.

"You would smile and make life sunshine if we were existing on husks in a cave!" said Albion. "You see, I sort of hoped father would have got over his tantrums and made up with us long ago. He don't seem to have any idea of doing it up to date. I fancy he's going to let us shift for ourselves."

The woes of this contented young couple were those common to disobedient children who love and marry at variance with parental command. Briefly, Albion Thorpe had wedded the only girl he had ever loved, in open defiance of the wish and mandate of his crochety, self-willed old father. Now, with a nearly empty flour barrel and rent day at hand, Albion started out to find work. He had in mind a sign he had seen in the window of a paint shop: "Man Wanted." He soon reached the place.

"Position still open?" he questioned of its proprietor.

"For the right man, yes," assented the other, dubiously looking the applicant over from head to foot. "What can you do?"

"Well, I whitewashed a fence when I was a boy," smiled Albion.

"I might try you out on a special contract I've got. Vacant house on Elmore street. Belongs to a nonresident. All the floors and woodwork to varnish. It's a week's task. Think you could varnish?"

"I know I could," assented Albion daringly.

"You'll have to hire a woman to wash the woodwork ahead of you. Give her a dollar and a half a day. You get three."

"That's fine!" exuberated Albion. "I'll arrange for the cleaning and report inside of an hour," and he hurried back home to don his oldest suit.

"Why, this is just grand!" enthused Winnie. "About the scrubbing—I know just the person for you. I'll have her on duty by the time you get your varnishing traps there."

Albion entered the vacant house whistling gayly, to catch the echo of a mellifluous voice humming a contented air in the front lower room.

"Hello! What's this?" he fairly gasped, as he came upon a feminine form, brush and cloth in hand, renovating the picture cornice—Winnie!

"Aren't you glad?" piped back his helpmeet, looking more cheerful than ever in neat calico and an enormous apron.

"I thought you were going to send a woman—"

"Yes, that's me. Am I not one?" interrogated Winnie.

At the end of five days the rooms were wholesome and spotless. The varnished floors and woodwork, smooth and shining, showed the expertness of a master mind, Winnie declared. They resembled real workers as they sat down on the stepladder at four o'clock Saturday afternoon.

"The boss said he would be here to pay us off," observed Albion.

"That must be him now," added Winnie, as an automobile halted outside, followed by footsteps in the hall.

"The interior work is all done," they caught the voice of their employer. "I'll get my men to put on the new rear fence next week."

"All right," came a response, and Albion gave a great start, for its owner, following the paint man into the room, was revealed as his august father. This, then, must be one of the numerous properties he owned in the district.

"I'll take you through the house to show you how excellently well my workers have done," observed the paint man, "soon as I pay them off."

"Your workers?" abruptly shouted the amazed John Thorpe. "Why, that's my son and his wife!"

"I think you're joking," smiled the paint man, "but, whether or not, they are the most delightful help I ever hired."

The old man fixed a speculative look upon the guilty pair. There was a lapse of dead silence. "Nice work you're making of life, eh?" he stormed.

"Yes, father," answered Albion meekly. "The boss here says so. I didn't know this was your house—"

"It isn't. It's yours," responded Mr. Thorpe, and his stern features relaxed. You ought to be ashamed to put that dainty, sunshiny little creature, your wife, at such work, although I honor her for the principle of the thing. No, the house isn't mine. It's yours for I give it to you. And you," to the trembling Winnie, "shake hands. And kiss me, if I'm not too bearish to deserve it. Never mind the varnish," and Winnie knew that the day was won.

What Tommy Would Say.

One day when small Tommy was called to the desk with his slate he accidentally stepped on his teacher's foot. She looked up, expecting a "Please pardon me," but Master Tommy was silent.

"Why, Tommy, what should you say," she asked.

Tommy hung his little head.

"What should you say, dear?"

Tommy began to cry.

"What should you say, Tommy?" persisted his teacher.

"I s—should s—say ouch!" sobbed Tommy.

Same Place Not There.

During the lesson one afternoon a violent thunderstorm arose and to lessen the fright of the children the teacher began telling of the wonders of the elements.

"And now, Jimmy," she asked, "why is it that lightning never strikes twice in the same place?"

"Because," said Jimmy confidently, "after it hits once the same place ain't there any more."—Sunshine Bulletin.

A Purpose in View.

"My friend," remarked the facetious man, "do you get any satisfaction out of staring at a thermometer when it registers 99 degrees in the shade?"

"None to speak of," replied the crusty individual, "but I hope that if I stand here and gaze at this thermometer the next blithering idiot who comes along won't think it necessary to remind me that it's a hot day."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

WITH THE HOBOES.

"Pete, dere's a farmer up de road dat says he'll give you $2 for a day's work!"

"What's de use of temptin' me when you know I ain't got de time. You orter understand dat out o'-practice like I am, it 'ud take me at least six weeks to do a day's work."

New Simile.

We used to say, until of late,
He spends his money like a "lord;"
But now, to be more up to date,
It's "like the aviation board."

Entertainment.

"Have you any objection to my inviting a friend to dinner?" asked Mr. Meekton.

"None whatever," replied his wife. "Only what's the object? If you give them simple food they won't like it and if you have an elaborate menu they'll criticise you for not economizing."

Something of a Pessimist.

"Of course, you are in favor of anti-loafing laws."

"Yes," replied Farmer Corntossel. "Only they are goin' to make some trouble at first by turnin' loose a lot of inexperienced people whose one idea of bein' busy is to get in the way."

A Wonderful Memory.

Mrs. Bostely—My husband can remember things a remarkably long time.

Mrs. Kutting—So I infer. I overheard him tell my husband he remembered to mail a letter for you a whole month after you had given it to him.

Maybe It Was Automobiles.

Nippen—Say, you ever know that watches are alluded to in the Bible?

Tuck—Nonsense, my friend.

The Reason.

"Binks is one of the most wide awake men I ever met."

"Is he so enterprising?"

"Not so much that as he suffers terribly from insomnia."

Unusual.

"Our child is unusually bright."

"Yes, considering the parents he has, I should say that is true."

"Soul of Wit."

Someone has said that "brevity is the soul of wit." It is, and in these strenuous times it would seem a very good idea to apply the same maxim to other channels of conversation. The man or woman who can handle an important subject briefly is sure of a royal welcome wherever he or she seeks an audience.

Women Live Longer Than Men.

Records show that more women live to be centenarians than men. When the census of the United States was taken in 1900, it was found that 6,298 persons between the ages of ninety-five and ninety-nine were living, and of this number 3,596 were women.

Winter-Killing of the Hedge

By JANE OSBORNE

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Forty years from now the old residents of Rosevale will still be alluding, no doubt, to "the year the hedges winter-killed." Perhaps by that time there will be a little uncertainty in the minds of some as to just which Good Friday it was that the United States "got into the war," and just how long that war lasted. They will have forgotten that old Peter Conkling—Rosevale's millionaire—didn't subscribe a cent to the Liberty loan and that Judge Robert Pritchard subscribed ten thousand, and that somebody's neighbor probably poisoned somebody's cat and that the doctor's widow had set her cap most openly for said Peter Conklin. All these things will have been forgotten forty years from now, but not the winter-killing of the hedge. That is the sort of landmark in the flight of time that we somehow always remember even when we forget affairs of larger or more personal interest. "It was the coldest winter on record," some octogenarians will say, "and I remember how the hedge twelve feet high that had been growing ten or a dozen years between Judge Pritchard's place and the old Marden place was winter-killed, roots and branches."

That this particular luxurious growth of privet had been entirely blighted as the effect of the unwonted cold weather last winter neither Judge Pritchard nor Hester Marden realized till weeks after the usual time for its buds to be bursting under the warmth of April sunshine. And it was after other Rosevalians, whose less luxurious hedges had also been blighted, had come to the realization that the only thing to do to save what life might remain in the roots of their hedges was to amputate all the dead branches above, that Hester on her side of the thick network of dead twigs and branches and Judge Robert Pritchard, hidden on his side, realized one warm spring evening that the old hedge would have to go. The hedge had been planted on the Marden side of the dividing line, so it was obviously up to Hester to have it cut down, although its branches had long since spread many feet over into the Pritchard domain. Hester hesitated several days after she had purchased the last pair of hedge-clips in the Rosevale hardware store before giving her order to the gardener-by-the-day to begin the amputation. It seemed like desecration to her; she could not make it seem other than unloyal and traitorous to the memory of poor old Aunt Bethiah. Still Aunt Bethiah would not have wanted to let the hedge remain as it was. Hester was sure of it. She planned an overnight trip to the large nearby city for the days when the cutting down operation was to take place and, after having cast a contrite look at the old painting of Aunt Bethiah that still hung over the marble mantelpiece in the old "front parlor," made up her mind to give the order.

There would have to be a first time in that unhedged garden, Hester assured herself. Even Aunt Bethiah could not object to her thirty-year-old niece going into her own garden under the circumstances. So as soon as she had eaten her solitary dinner on the day she returned from the city she left the table and descended into the old garden. The sun was still warm and golden and the wood thrushes somewhere in the Pritchard shrubbery were just beginning their long evening song. Hester tried not to see the change till she was actually in the garden. Then a strange sense of freedom and emancipation came over her. Already the plants and growing things in her garden had profited by the increase of air and sunshine that the passing of the hedge had allowed. The columbines and tulips were out earlier than usual and it seemed to Hester as if their colors were deeper and gayer than in the old days when they were hedged in by the twelve-foot privet.

And it was as if a new world had been opened and discovered to her when she first permitted her eyes to wander beyond the line where the privet had once been placed, over there in the fairy land of light green leaves and foliage where the wood thrushes sang. She had not seen that realm for ten years, not since the day the high board fence was taken down, and in consequence of that she was hurried away by Aunt Bethiah to be gone until the newly planted privet should have taken its place. Could it be that all these years that fairyland of leaves and blossoms had been there just beyond the privet? Hester was wondering.

And then came the voice of Judge Pritchard, who must have been in his garden behind one of his lilac bushes all the time that she was inspecting her own transformed domain.

Neither Hester nor Robert said anything very profound or clever or worth remembering that evening when they spoke for the first time in ten years. Each had known from the time they knew that the hedge had to go that their speaking would be the inevitable result. Perhaps that is why Hester had felt so especially guilty when she stood before old Aunt Bethiah's picture a few minutes before. The spell cast by Aunt Bethiah was entirely broken when Hester permitted herself to be urged across that old barrier on the excuse of looking at some especially luxurious rose-colored columbines that Judge Pritchard insisted had been vagrants from her garden and had shown themselves a season or so before.

"I knew they were yours," he told her, "and that is why I cherished them so. I had the gardener nurse them like orchids." Hester was kneeling over to touch the silky blossoms with her fingers. "I wonder how they dared go through the hedge?" was all she could think of saying, and then her eyes and those of Robert Pritchard met and both knew that the barrier that had gone down with the hedge could never be replaced.

After they had seated themselves on the rustic bench under Judge Pritchard's lilacs, on the excuse of hearing the thrushes' song, Hester volunteered the suggestion that it really seemed only a day since the last time she had sat on the same bench under the lilacs. And then she wondered whether she had said anything that was too disloyal to the memory of Bethiah Marden, the stern old aunt who had brought her up and left her all her property.

Robert Pritchard answered this by taking Hester's hand in his exactly as he had that last time, ten years before, and that, too, seemed quite natural, though Hester blushed quite as if she had been twenty instead of thirty.

"You didn't go away because you wanted to?" he asked.

Hester shook her head.

"Tell me just what happened and then I'll tell you something you perhaps never knew."

Hester had rehearsed the details of just what happened on that memorable occasion so often to herself that the recounting was not difficult. "Well, you see, Aunt Bethiah had ideas of her own about how girls should spend their time and so long as I read poetry and novels and did embroidery in the garden she was satisfied. But when I improved my time talking to you instead, she was distressed. So long as that high board fence was here she was satisfied. I was quite safe in the garden. Then the Neighborhood association decided to have all fences down, and though Aunt Bethiah fought it, the association had its way. She planted the hedge and took me off for four years in France—she said she had intended to take me, anyway, and perhaps she had. I would have liked going better if it had not seemed like punishment for talking to you those days when the fence was down before we started. It was just about this time of the year, wasn't it?

"And then by the time we came back the hedge was high enough for a protection and you had forgotten all about your neighbor, and Aunt Bethiah was sure she had done her duty. I think the poor old dear died happier because the hedge was twelve feet high and five feet thick. She used to smile so contentedly when people told her it was the finest hedge in the state. I really don't know why she should have objected so much to our talking."

"Perhaps I was very much to blame," Robert Pritchard explained. "I was twenty-five then, and went about things differently than I would now. You see I made the Neighborhood association vote to have the fences taken down. It was my first attempt at civic improvement, and no one but Aunt Bethiah suspected my motive. She called at my office and told me her opinion of me and I got as hot-headed as she was and told her that I wanted to marry you and intended to do it. I'd spent the evening here by the lilacs with you then and I knew my heart. I didn't believe the good lady when she told me that you had told her I annoyed you and had asked to be taken away, so I can't hold it up against her. I've wanted, though, to hear you say that it wasn't so."

"And I really think Aunt Bethiah liked you all along—do you believe she is so very cross because we are sitting here again under the lilac bush?"

Judge Pritchard would have liked to say just then that he was entirely indifferent as to whether Aunt Bethiah approved or not—but so completely was he concerned with the realization that he had within his reach the love of the woman of his dreams that he had no thoughts for the other woman who had separated them ten years before.

Why We Hear Heart Throbs.

The cause of the sound of normal heart beats has not been definitely ascertained. There are normally two sounds—the first, which is called systolic, is dull and somewhat prolonged; it is followed quickly by the second, called diastolic, which is shorter and sharper. A pause follows the second sound. It is supposed that the vibration and closure of the valves between the auricles and ventricles is one of the causes of the first sound; the contraction of the ventricles, or the striking of the heart against the walls of the chest, may be the cause. The second sound is known to be caused by the vibration produced by the closure of the semilunar valves.

War Demand for Shoddy.

The process of reclaiming wool from all sorts of rags has become a task of increasing magnitude since the placing of the government's big orders for army clothing, special machinery being employed to reduce the rags to shreds, wash them, separate the wool from the cotton, etc. Cloth experts claim this reworked wool, or shoddy, is suitable for use in overcoats, because a warmer, more closely woven fabric can be produced, if used in the right proportion with virgin wool, says Popular Mechanics. For this reason it is used in army overcoating, but all other uniform cloth is now pure wool, according to government officials.

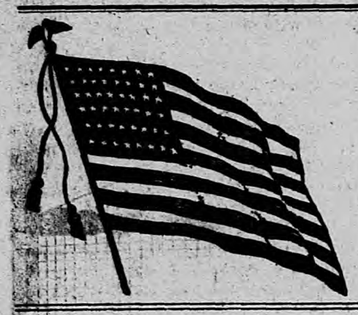
TUESDAY MORNING, AUG. 20, 1918



Very few of our women friends have protested against the increase of taxes on tobacco.

The Germans not merely have sunk a lot of ships, but they have sunk a lot of money in propaganda.

From present indications Kaiser Bill and his six sons had better move back a safe distance from the trench lines.

Every bit of food supply you buy from near home releases freight car space to carry food and supplies to the soldiers.

The fellows who always say it is no use to cry over spilled milk, might be reminded that it is also no use to spill milk.

A man who is seen going into a butcher's shop nowadays lays himself under suspicion of ability to pay a good sized income tax.

It takes an awful lot of print paper in these times for the metropolitan Sunday papers to describe the latest styles of underwear.

The Kaiser having announced that the moon is made of green cheese, the German people unanimously accept the statement as a scientific fact.

The people who think newspaper work is non-essential may be the same ones who complain that a good many people still don't know what the war is about.

The German people are not worried about our bumper crops as Kaiser Bill has positively informed them that we are now reduced to eating our shoe leather.

A good place to put the people who have been selling worthless raincoats to the government would be a jail without any roof on it to protect them from the weather.

Among the people who wonder why groceries cost so much are those who demand that the grocer get out his team and deliver anything they order within half an hour.

The people who complain because the trains are late are often the same ones who lug around enormous trunks that take a lot of time to move in and out of the baggage cars.

While anyone may feel proud of a son who is diligently hoeing corn all summer, it is not a sufficiently heroic occupation to warrant putting up a service flag in the parlor window.

TOWNS GROW BY PERSISTENT EFFORT

In previous numbers of these studies of the reasons for town growth, emphasis has been principally laid upon means by which the manufacturing and other producing interests of the town can be helped to enlarge. But not all town growth comes in these ways.

A great many towns grow by their persistent effort to make the community a desirable center to live in. If a town has good schools, if it has clean streets, pleasant and attractive park spaces, private grounds neatly kept and decorated with flowers and shrubbery, good stores, efficient public services, people will choose such a place in preference to others less pleasing. Those who grow up there are likely to stay on and make it their life-long home, and others move in from the surrounding country.

Moreover, business men, in choosing a place of residence to carry on production, do not always first consider the special financial inducements offered them to locate in a certain place. They are very apt to select a town that will be a good place to live in and bring their families up in.

A well kept-up, handsome, well equipped town, becomes known far and wide. There is a constant drift of new residents into it.

So town growth is not usually attained by any spectacular stroke. It calls for persistent work by its citizens to maintain high standards in the physical appearance of the community and in all its institutions.

Town growth calls for faith and loyalty on the part of the citizens. If we expect Princess Anne to grow, we must believe in it, we must constantly have the prosperity of the town on our minds. We must take all possible occasions to speak well of it. If detractors and knockers criticise it, we must defend it. We must all the time be trying to interest our neighbors and friends in community work, and we must be always on the watch for chances to secure new enterprises and new residents.

ONE WAY OF MAKING NEWSPAPERS

A certain prominent newspaper, about a week before the French captured a city, put out a news story that it was captured. The editor probably thought, when he printed the story, that at the rate of French advance by the time he got his paper out the city would be captured. Then he would get the credit of a scoop.

Sometimes that way of making newspapers works. Occasionally things happen as the faking editor thinks they will. He gets the opportunity to brag about the superiority of his news service. There are a considerable number of people who can be fooled over and over again by a newspaper that resorts to this method. But the people who will swallow that kind of stuff right along are not good people to sell goods to, as advertisers usually realize. The home newspaper published in your own town would kill itself in a week if it resorted to such methods.

PERSONAL JOURNALISM

The retirement of Henry Watterson from the active editorship of the Louisville Courier-Journal takes away one of the old giants whose personal force was so dominating a figure in the American Press. We have plenty of big men in the newspaper business still. As a whole the average of intellectual ability is higher than it used to be. But to-day the work is more impersonal. The big newspapers are great machines, where few of the readers know or care who writes what they read in haste. In the smaller newspapers the editor is often a personal force. But running a newspaper is a more difficult business problem than it used to be. A great many editors find their best thought absorbed by the business office.

The old time editor spent his whole time in his office buried deep in dusty papers and books. He thought deeply, read much, and his writing was shrewd, mature and pertinent.

The modern editor mingles more with daily life. He does not spend so much time in the world of books, but he spends more in the world of men. He is less brilliant a writer, but is a more active, practical worker for community progress.

The career of a man like Watterson may well be an inspiration to every youth who aspires to newspaper success. He did not make as much money as some, but he rendered more service and attained greater respect. The way for the young journalist to follow along the same path is to study the masters of English style, be ashamed to turn out slovenly writing, read deeply of history and politics, converse much with men of many points of view, and always speak what they think. It is a career full of rewards superior to money.

Suffragist Extremists

Unpatriotic would be a fair word to apply to the women whose peformances in Washington led to their arrest and who are said to be planning yet fresh demonstrations of disorder and recalcitrancy. The tactics employed are upon a par with the terrorist methods of the Germans. They both seek, through annoyance and spectacular demonstration, to intimidate and thus to advance their ends. The women who have dishonored their cause in Washington and who are said to be ready to carry out like performances would doubtless go to any hysterical extreme to carry out their dogged determination to displace persuasion and the logic of their cause by acts that humiliate those who hold sane views with regard to woman's suffrage and who look upon this class of self-exploiters as out of harmony with the spirit of women and the high ideals and aims of the suffrage movement.

Who can suppose for a moment that the most distinguished spokesman for the cause of woman's suffrage, President Woodrow Wilson, feels anything but disgust for these rabid and senseless and unpatriotic performances. He is by fact of his office and attitude the leader of the suffrage movement in America, and if for no other reason than caprit de corps and common courtesy, the women should see that their movement is not injured by a campaign that would win his approval.

The small set of ill-balanced agitators should be given the benefit of the espoinage law, application of which might readily be made to some of their acts or proposed acts.—Baltimore American.

GOVERNMENT TO SELL MILEAGE

Good On Any Road And For Any Number Of People

Passenger mileage books, interchangeable and good on any railroad, will be placed on sale to-day (Tuesday), August 20th. They will be accepted in payment of passenger fares on trains, in exchange for tickets and for extra baggage charges. Two books are being prepared—one with 1,000 coupons, each coupon worth three cents or one mile of travel, to be sold for $30 with the addition of $2.40 war tax collected when the book is bought, and another with 500 coupons, selling for $15 with $1.20 additional war tax.

Each book is to be transferable and may be used for any number of passengers at the same time. Travelers may present these books to conductors on trains if they wish, but are advised to have the mileage script exchanged for tickets between points where there are long and short routes in order to gain advantage of the shortest distance and lowest charge.

Railroad Administration officials decided not to make the mileage script acceptable for Pullman charges, because the war tax on berths or parlor car seats is 10 per cent., or 2 per cent. higher than on passenger fares. This would have complicated the collection of war taxes.

The Drowning Season

This summer differs from no previous summer in the matter of drowning accidents, most of them due to precisely the same cause—the failure to recognize the fact that water may be as fatal as fire to the careless or reckless. Persons who cannot swim a stroke risk their lives in streams about which they know little or nothing, and every year in every part of the country the thoughtless pay by death for their want of thought.

It seems useless to utter warnings on the subject. The lure of the cool water is so great in hot weather like this that caution is difficult, and it is hard to restrain the natural impulse to plunge into the refreshing and inviting element. Man is one of the few animals that cannot swim without being taught, and he is constantly forgetting that fact in summer time, with tragic results.—Baltimore Sun.

France last Thursday was given a loan of $200,000,000 by the Treasury, bringing the total credits to France to $2,692,040,000.

The aggregate credits to the allies now amount to $6,692,040,000.

A Bilious Attack

When you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take three of Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. They only cost a quarter.

THERE IS A MATERIAL DIFFERENCE.—Some ice receptacles are built to sell and all that can be said of them is the price. In many instances the manufacturer, or seller, is not heard from any more. You have probably noticed that standard merchandise does not get into such hands, and is handled only by reliable merchants. We desire to call your attention to our line of Baldwin Dry-Air Refrigerators, which we have handled for fifteen years, our sales increasing each year. If you want to know about the merit of this line ask the users how their ice bill compares with those using other makes. Our stock is complete. Prices in keeping with quality. Would be glad to show you through the line.

Killing The Goose

Money, and money in vast quantities, must be raised by taxation to carry on the great war. However willing in spirit, even the most patriotic people in the world cannot pay taxes unless they are permitted to earn money with which to pay them. This means that they must be allowed to carry on business under conditions which shall enable them to realize profits. Their profits must not be cut down to a mere living wage. If they are, there will be nothing left with which to pay taxes to carry on the war. It may be said that these are mere truisms. So are the Ten Commandments. They are truisms, however, which cannot prudently be ignored.—New York Sun.

Uncle Sam Biggest Cobbler

Uncle Sam has become the largest repairer of shoes and clothing in the nation. Also he does a large business in dry cleaning and pressing uniforms. During the month of June alone at the various camps and cantonments 284,111 pairs of shoes were repaired, and repairs were made to 49,159 hats, 71,496 overcoats, 48,631 coats, 141,420 pairs of breeches, nearly a quarter of a million suits of underwear and numerous other items. The mending jobs for the month totaled 1,184,033.

The cleaning and pressing done mounted to a little more than half a million garments. On the side, according to War Department figures, a nice little laundering business was done during the month—5,163,642 pieces being handled.

TRACTOR WILL LAST ABOUT EIGHT YEARS

Outfit Enables Owners to Enlarge Their Farm Operations.

Study Conducted by United States Department of Agriculture—Used on Average Forty-Five Days Each Year.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The average life of a farm tractor is from 7½ to 8 years, according to estimates furnished by over 600 experienced tractor owners on representative corn-belt farms in Illinois. This is brought out in a study conducted in 1917 and the spring of 1918 by the United States department of agriculture, a report of which is published in Farmers' Bulletin 963. The reports of the tractor owners show that the outfits are used on an average of 45 days per year.

While at first glance this may appear low, when it is remembered that on farms where horses do all the work they are used on an average of only about 100 days annually, it will be seen that where both horses and tractor are used, even though the number of horses is somewhat reduced, the machine need not be expected to have employment for as many days annually as did the horses. The horses kept will do some of the work, which will, of course, decrease the amount to be done by the tractor. A considerable percentage of the 100 days' work done by horses represents odd jobs for which the tractor cannot be used to advantage. Even if the machine were to do all the work formerly done by the horses, it would not normally be employed 100 days per year, inasmuch as it does the work more rapidly.

It should be borne in mind, says the bulletin, that practically all farm operations must be carried on within limited periods, and that between these seasons there will often be no field work which the tractor can do, either on the home farm or for neighbors. The fact that weather and soil conditions are such as to permit field work with a tractor does not necessarily mean that there is such work to be done. Farm management plays an important part in organizing the farm so as to provide profitable employment for the tractor during as many days as possible. Such organization involves the planning of a crop rotation which will furnish a large amount of work which it can do, the elimination of as many horses as desirable, and the distribution of the work over a long period. However, the rotation should include only such crops as can be grown profitably in that particular section.

The significance of the fact that a large percentage of the Illinois farmers who reported enlarged their farms after buying tractors is readily apparent when the tractor's place in farm management is thus considered. Obviously these men have learned through experience that much more land per man can be handled when a tractor is used than with horses only, and that to get the most out of their investment they must farm land enough to keep their tractors busy at profitable work throughout as much as possible of the available working season.

"SAFE FARMING" IS FAVORED IN SOUTH

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

How the farmers of the Southern states are following the "safe farming" program, advocating the production on every farm of the food for the family and the feed for the live stock, is shown by the fact that in 1917 there was an increase in production of all food and feed crops in the South except rice and hay. A slight decrease in rice from the 1916 production was due principally to protracted dry weather and salt water.

No Milk There.

You can't squeeze blood out of a turnip—nor a profitable amount of milk out of a cow that hasn't got it in her.

Separate Milk at Once.

Separate the milk as soon as you have finished milking and you will have a good quality of skim milk for the calves.

FEED FAT TO THE GUNS WHILE ALLIES USE MAKESHIFTS

All fats are jealously horded in Great Britain these days. Butter is a treat to be rarely indulged in. Margarine, once the butter of the poor, has become universal in the British Isles. Rich and poor alike spread it on their bread. Both butter and margarine are doled out in very small weekly allowances. Each individual is entitled on his or her food card to one-uarter of a pound of either once a week.

Lard is just as carefully husbanded by the Food Controller. Dripping is naturally more extensively used for cooking than any other form of fat. In fact, dripping, long used in place of butter on bread by the poor of Great Britain, is now actually served spread on slices of bread at popular London restaurants corresponding to Child's restaurants in American cities.

Every drop of fat which can possibly be spared goes for the manufacture of glycerine for munitions. Britain's care and frugality in this respect are an example to other countries.

Canadian military camps in England are models in this saving of grease. Every ounce from the slop tins, every drop of the dishwater is strained and skimmed. The purified fat is used over again for food; the residue sent to munition factories. So scanty are the leavings that local pig keepers, once delighted to get camp swill for their grunting porkers, now scarcely consider it worth while to call.

And how does Germany compare with Britain in regard to fats? A Canadian soldier just escaped after long imprisonment in Hunland says he has actually seen the German soldiers guarding the prison camp picking up tins which the British and Canadians prisoners of war had thrown away and licking the grease off them.

It is because of the crying need overseas for fat, both for factory and table use, that the Maryland Food Administration keeps urging the reduction in its consumption here. The thrifty housewise who gets her greases, even her soaps, from the savings of her own kitchen, does not have to go for it into the open market, which is having a hard time meeting the tremendous war-time demands upon it. Here is one more way in which the women of Maryland can help win the war, and Food Administrator Baetjer sanguinely hopes that none among them will be slackers.

CAN NOW—SWEETEN LATER.

In view of the further restrictions put upon the use of sugar, the Maryland Food Administration is offering advice on how to get through the canning season without it. Here is one idea that will help housewives to tide over the crisis:

Home-made fruit juices take no sugar, and may be used during the winter months in a variety of ways. One important use for fruit juices is in the making of jellies at a time of year when sugar or its substitutes may be more plentiful, and when it is more convenient to do the work. In this way freshly made jellies may be available all through the winter.

Fruit juice may be pressed out of fruit by means of a cider press, special fruit press or other improvised presses; then heated in an acid-proof kettle up to 110 degrees F. The fruit juice may then be poured into ordinary hot jars, hot bottles or tin cans, and handled by the same directions as those for canning of fruit itself.

Trust in God and keep your dishwater free of grease. Nitroglycerine is made of fats.

White beans are the equivalent of meats. It is crowding things to serve the two at the same time.

Never mix two lots of milk.

Salads counteract the tendency to anaemia, scurvy, gout and rheumatism. If you are threatened with any of these ailments, make the grocer your druggist.

On a wheatless day no grain of wheat should be used. Not more than seven of these days should be observed in any one week.

JELLIED FISH.
(Official Recipes.)

Mix one and one-half cupfuls of cooked fish with two tablespoonfuls chopped capers. Chopped celery and hard-boiled eggs may be added. Soak one tablespoonful gelatine in two tablespoons cold water. When the gelatine is dissolved, mix it with one cupful boiling water. Add two tablespoonfuls lemon juice and seasoning of salt and pepper. Stir in the fish mixture, pour in a chilled mold, and set in a cool place to harden. Cut in slices, and serve on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing. The gelatine and the fish may be arranged in layers if the housekeeper has time to spend in preparing the dish.

CORN COMES INTO ITS OWN.

Corn, rightly used, will help materially to win the war; moreover, it is a real American product, and it ought to be our national dish. Not so many years ago corn and cornmeal formed the basis of only a few foods and dishes. Now corn is a breakfast cereal, the basis of nearly 100 sorts of bread and muffins; it's a sugar, a syrup, a salad oil, a cooking oil, a dessert material and even a candy, and being such a distinctly American food it should rank with the Thanksgiving turkey and ice cream in our affections.

Among our French, Belgium and Italian Allies salads are rightly regarded as a necessity. She is a poor housewife who looks upon them as a luxury.

THE BOARDERS ARE KIN TO THE ROOMERS.

EMERSON C. HARRINGTON,
By the Governor:
THOMAS W. SIMMONS,
Secretary of State.

Things Injurious to Fish.

The gaunt skeletons of trees which are so conspicuous in the "coke regions" show the effects of sulphurous gases on vegetation, and the influence of mine water on fish life may be readily imagined. The heavy sediment covers up the gravelly spawning beds, and suffocates the eggs, thus inflicting injury on the fishes at the most vulnerable point. The sawmill is the "dearest foe" of nature lovers. Its insatiable maw has well-nigh devoured our forests, and, not content with the desolation it has produced in this way on land, it is ruining our lakes and rivers by sawdust.

Human Development.

Man has been on the earth perhaps some twenty odd thousand years, and it is only the last three thousand that we are much concerned with. To suppose that a modern Englishman must necessarily be at a higher stage of mental development than an ancient Greek is almost the same mistake as to argue that Browning must be a better poet than Wordsworth because he came later. If the soul, or the brain, of man is developing, it is not developing as fast or so steadily as all that.—Gilbert Murray in the Century Magazine.

Best to Face Facts in Life.

There are very few of us who find life all that we pictured it in our youth. Often it proves very hard for us, because we insist upon idealizing it instead of taking it as it is. We must not refuse to face facts. It would be very satisfying and beautiful, perhaps, if life could be what we want it. But the truth is that we cannot take it and make it over to our own ends. However, we can take ourselves in hand and fit ourselves to life, if we will.—Exchange.

Use of Peltry in History.

In using peltry we walk backward in history. In what we moderns call the early history of Europe much that was lovely was done with peltry. And further back, when artificial heat was not known, when men and women lived in damp huts or palaces, when life was crude and raw and self-sacrificing in a way that we may never know, peltry was the true means of covering the body and making one's self not only beautiful, but comfortable.

All Money Is Good.

A minister says there is no such thing as tainted money. That's right; all we ever look over our change for is to see that there isn't a plugged quarter in the lot.—Detroit Free Press.

"Mother of Presidents."

Virginia has sometimes been called mother of presidents because she has furnished so many as compared with other states. Since the foundation of the government eight of our presidents have been natives of Virginia and no other state has furnished more than five. Of twenty-seven presidents eight were born in Virginia, six in Ohio, two in New York, two in North Carolina, two in Massachusetts and one each in New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Vermont and New Jersey.

Drilling Hard Steel.

In preparing a drill to be used on hard steel, the drill should be heated to an even heat, the scale removed and the tip of the drill be touched to a drop of quicksilver and then be quenched in water. After this treatment the drill will go through the hardest steel without trouble. A simple method of tempering small tools quickly is to heat them red hot and then thrust them into a potato, after which they should be drawn to the correct temper to remove brittleness.

How Many Shingles?

To figure the number of shingles a house will require proceed as follows: Measure the length of the roof to be covered. Measure the distance from one eave over the peak to the other eave. These dimensions necessarily are in feet. Multiply the dimensions together. Divide by 100. The quotient will be the number of thousand shingles required. To determine the number of bundles, multiply this number by four.—Form Life.

Just to Ourselves.

It is hard to be really just to ourselves. A great many of us are more lenient with our own faults than with those of other people, while not a few censure themselves far more harshly for a false step than they would think of censuring another. What we should strive for is to be neither too exacting not too lenient where our shortcomings are concerned, but to give ourselves the benefit of simple justice.

Peterhof Founded in 1711.

The town of Peterhof, 18 miles from Petrograd, was founded in 1711 by Peter the Great. The imperial palace there is built in imitation of the famous palace of Versailles.

Suspicious.

The professor regarded, with an eye of suspicion, the small, yellow cube the waiter had brought him. "I take thee," he murmured, "for butter—or worse."—Boston Transcript.

Thrift!

Some years ago when I was working for a civil engineer the resident engineer requested the draftsmen in the London office always to send linen tracings, and as large as possible. On visiting the work I discovered the reason. When the tracings were done with his wife boiled them down and made shirts for her little boys.—E. Arden Minty, F. R. I. B. A., in London Mail.

Food in the Far North.

Reindeer stew and roast water fowl, bear meat or a walrus stew are among the dishes offered in Labrador, Greenland and Faroe islands. In time a taste may be acquired for these things if one is frozen in long enough to be of a grateful spirit. Coarse bread, plenty of codfish, cranberry jam or a blueberry (dried) cake may help matters along.

Early-Day Road Makers.

The Romans were the great road-makers of olden times, and the British are their successors. Sir William Robertson, chief of the imperial general staff of England, astonished a company of diners by remarking that the British in France used 50,000 tons of stone in five weeks in road building.

Truly Admirable.

Mrs. Macpherson has just received a telegram from Birmingham. "What an admirable invention the telegram is!" she exclaimed, "when you consider that this message has come a distance of 120 miles and the gum on the envelope isn't dry yet."

And Woman.

"To be happy a man needs a wonderful digestion and a woman needs beautiful attire." "Yes," commented Miss Cayenne, "one wants the stomach of an ostrich and the other wants the feathers."

Female Mosquito Is Pest.

The male mosquito lives but a short time and does not often suck blood. The female normally feeds on the juice of plants, but prefers blood whenever there are any animals or humans to furnish it.

POULTRY

GET RETURNS FROM POULTRY

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The farmer who raises the ordinary grains and keeps some live stock has perhaps the greatest opportunity that has ever come to him for making profit from poultry. The possibilities for profit are perhaps not so large as they used to be for the special poultry farmer, and that fact may have led some general farmers to believe that the situation applies in some way to them; but there exists just here an unusual paradox. The very conditions that may make poultry and egg production a losing enterprise on the specialized poultry farm tend to make it an increasingly gainful one for the general farmer. Where nearly all of his feed has to be bought at high prices, the margin between cost of production and proceeds from sale becomes extremely narrow, but where practically all of the poultry feed is made up of waste materials that would otherwise not be utilized in any manner, the percentage of profit becomes very much larger when prices are high than it ever could have been when prices were low. Poultry on the farm obtain a very great part of their feed by foraging, by gleaning the waste from stable yards and feeding lots, by consuming the scraps from the kitchen door, by preying upon insect pests in pasture and field, and in only a relatively small degree from grain or other commodities that would be marketable. A farmer whose poultry is fed in this way may count all of the money received for eggs and surplus poultry as practically clear profit. When, therefore, eggs and poultry are selling at higher prices than have usually been obtainable, the farmer's margin of profit without expenditure is very greatly increased.

It is, therefore, to the farmers of the country that the nation must look for the greater part of the immediate increase of poultry products which will make it possible to supply our own army and navy with red meats and at the same time furnish the allies with the animal foods they need.

DISINFECTION OF HENHOUSE

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Once a year the poultry house should be thoroughly cleaned out and sprayed with one of the coal tar disinfectants or given a good coat of whitewash containing 5 per cent of crude carbolic acid or creosol. Unless the exterior is painted, a coat of whitewash will help preserve the lumber and give a neater appearance to the building. Spring is one of the best seasons to clean up and whitewash the poultry house. A well-made whitewash is the cheapest of all paints, and if properly made serves equally well either for exterior or interior surfaces.

A good whitewash can be made by slaking about 10 pounds of quicklime in a pail with 2 gallons of water, covering the pail with cloth or burlap and allowing it to slake for one hour. Water is then added to bring the whitewash to a consistency which may be applied readily. A waterproof whitewash for exterior surfaces may be made as follows: (1) Slake 1 bushel of quicklime in 12 gallons of hot water, (2) dissolve 2 pounds of common salt and 1 pound of sulphate of zinc in 2 gallons of boiling water; pour (2) into (1), and add 2 gallons of skim milk and mix thoroughly. Whitewash is spread lightly over the surface with a broad brush.

Guineas Gaining Favor.

Guinea fowls are growing in favor as a substitute for game birds, with the result that guinea raising is becoming more profitable.

Purebred Fowls Best.

If you are raising scrub chickens, you certainly are not making near the amount that you could if you had purebred fowls.

HOME TOWN HELPS

Thorough Planning Before Construction Is Begun Means Satisfaction When Home Is Completed.

Few persons in planning the location of a house take into consideration the necessity of having the rooms so placed as to make them as comfortable as possible. Little heed is paid as to which way the lot should face and on which side of the house certain rooms should be placed. Careful attention to what are considered for the most part as immaterial points in building location and design is very important and results in satisfaction after the house is built.

The lot should face either the south or west and whatever else is done the house must suit the grounds on which it is built. The dining room is a great factor, worthy of consideration, and it should be so planned as to leave south or east exposure. If so located it will be warmed by the morning sun and at other times will be sheltered from the hot sun. The living room or library should have south or west exposures. The hall in many instances may be made into a combination reception room and front hallway. In this way the living room or library is given more privacy.

Kitchens should be well lighted and ventilated, while bedrooms are much more comfortable when they are of ample size and have windows of sufficient size to provide light and air. Bathrooms should be featured by their cleanableness and lack of ornate trimmings. Open-work plumbing, thus exposing to view the pipes and giving an opportunity to clean them, should be a feature of these rooms.

Cellars are factors also needing attention. One with a cement floor in a house with a good foundation and guarded against waters from heavy storms should be sought, and this can be obtained by careful planning as to details.

THREE THINGS TO CONSIDER

Vital Points Must Be Studied Before Work of Remodeling House Is Put Under Way.

In the problem of remodeling a country house three elements are vital in determining the plans: the site, the surroundings and the amount of money to be expended. The extent of the plot of ground, if restricted to a small area with little likelihood of future increase by accession, will be an important factor in deciding the general changes of the house, as some types of building require more space, further distance from the road and other essentials to bring out their best lines.

A country house should harmonize with its surroundings in design, color and materials. A house standing out boldly on the top of a hill and visible for miles should differ essentially in appearance from one nestling in among the trees at the edge of the woods, from a house on the banks of a lake or from a villa set back from the village street. Every natural advantage from the standpoint of health, view, light and convenience should be utilized; every disadvantage neutralized. The amount of money to be expended is a factor determining the extent and manner in which the other two vital elements may be best met and mastered.

Home Beautifying.

The principles of proper planting are not hard to master. The shrubs should be massed into corners and borders; and a selection made differing in height so that all of them can be seen and intermingle in effect, with their bloom coming at different seasons, so that they are always interesting. You can easily choose this graduation from the lists referred to. One often sees an elegant house that lacks the final touch to change it into a "home." Landscape planting is the frame of the picture; the artistic setting; that final touch that changes your house to a home. As a background or frame to the picture which is to be created shrubs or trees are indispensable, the idea being to have the surroundings harmonize so that the impression will be comfortable and homelike.

Consider Needs of Trees.

Two strong points must be urged in the planting of trees in either street or garden, but more especially in street trees. One of these is the matter of improving methods of watering. In all plantings on streets a tile, pipe or box should be placed so that water may be applied not less than three feet below the surface. A more important matter is that of adequate width in parkways. In some soils drainage is also necessary or good results will not be had.

Paris Sets Good Example.

Paris contains 86,000 street trees and these constitute the city's chief claim to beauty. In spite of this being their most glorious possession the trees are maintained at considerable expense, for the soil of Paris is very poor. Yet how lamely do we plant and control, where the best trees nearly care for themselves throughout the year.

Will You Help?

One of the things that causes telephone congestion is the practice of abandoning calls. A subscriber will call a number and if he doesn't get an almost instantaneous connection, will hang up and try later. This means that the operator's work, as far as she has gone, must be repeated. We trust you will help us to do away with this by remaining on the line until the party answers or the operator reports. It takes less time, it makes less work for the operator,—and she is a mighty busy person these days—and involves less use of the lines.

AMOUNT OF FOOD NEEDED

Committee of Experts Has Decided Just What Must Be Supplied to the Average Man.

As a basis for calculating the amount of food which must be provided for the human system the interallied scientific food commission has found that an average man of 154 pounds working eight hours a day requires food having an energy value of 3,300 calories.

The commission consists of representatives of the United States, France, Italy, Belgium and Great Britain, and its purpose is to consider the food problem of the allies from a scientific point of view, and in agreement with the interallied executives to make proposals to the allied governments.

The commission agreed that, in event it should become impossible to supply 3,300 calories of food, a reduction of 10 per cent could be suffered for some time without injury to health. The minimum ration of fat for the "average man" was determined upon as two and five-eighths ounces a day.

The commission recommended that a uniform average milling extraction of 85 per cent for wheat be adopted throughout the allied countries, but this extraction may vary from 80 per cent in summer to 90 per cent in winter.

The commission held sessions in London, Paris and Rome.

A Reel Treat.

"Ladies and gentlemen," began the manager of the Dillydally moving picture theater, appearing in front of the screen, "it affords me pleasure to assure you that we are about to present for your entertainment a unique departure in modern motion pictures—a 1,000-foot film, on which, after about 800 feet have been used in exploiting the title, the name of the author, the oxlike countenance of the famous star, Francis X. Mushman, the fact that it was produced under the personal supervision of a great genius of whom you never heard before, and the information that the photography, which is no better and no worse than common, was done by another total stranger, there will positively be nearly 200 feet of pictures given!"—Kansas City Star.

Too Easy.

Two children were trying to decide on a game with which to amuse themselves, one summer afternoon. "Oh, no, let's not play that," said one in answer to a suggestion, "it's too easy." And the child who had suggested the game at once expressed agreement. "Yes, it's so easy that it isn't any fun." If even small children realize that a thing ceases to be interesting when it is too easy, older girls, surely, should not grumble if something a little difficult is asked of them. The fun of life comes from doing things that are not easy.—Pennsylvania Grit.

Princess Anne People Should Not Wait Until It Is Too Late

The appalling death rate from kidney disease is due largely to the fact that the little kidney troubles are usually neglected until they become serious. The slight symptoms often give place to chronic disorders and the sufferer may slip gradually into some serious form of kidney complaint.

If you suffer from backache, headaches, dizzy spells; if the kidney secretions are irregular of passage and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. Help the kidneys at once.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for kidney disorders—they act where others fail. Over one hundred thousand people have recommended them. Here's a case at home:

Mrs. H. B. Wherrett, Antioch avenue extended, Princess Anne, says: "I had been troubled nearly all my life with kidney trouble and had severe backaches at times. If I did anything that made me stoop over, I suffered with severe pains through the small of my back, especially when I straightened up. At times I could see little black specks and flashes of color in front of my eyes. During the last attack I used one box of Doan's Kidney Pills and I have had no further trouble. I cannot recommend this medicine too highly."

MEMORY THAT WILL LAST

French Gratitude to America Is Deeply Engraved on the Hearts of Her People.

Kathleen Norris, writing in the Woman's Home Companion, gives an imaginary conversation with a young French girl describing the coming of the American soldiers to France as she is supposed to remember it:

"'And men—to stand beside our men—from America! I remember standing at the chateau gateway on a bright November afternoon and seeing them come up the road. Soldiers! We were used to soldiers! But these were different. Grandmere was with me, we had been here all the time.

"'They came along, in the streaming afternoon sunlight, and they smiled and waved at me. "They are the Americans!" grandmere said, and she began to cry softly. "God bless them—God bless them!" she whispered, over and over. And that night, as you know, we had their officers at the chateau, and one of them told me he also had a daughter, not much younger than I, and that her name was Virginie—

"'I don't know why — for, God knows, there were hard times, and dark times, ahead. But from that moment I felt—hope. Child that I was, I seemed to see, behind those marching men, the big and generous nation that was dedicating itself to their service, the women everywhere, with their sewing and cooking, saving and planning, their letters and their prayers—all one in their work for an ideal beside which the comfort and the ease of this generation was as nothing!'"

REAL JOB, THAT OF THE "UMP"

Man Who Holds Indicator in Professional Ball Game Surely Has No "Soft Snap."

There are those who will scoff at the idea that umpiring a ball game is work, but let these, just once, stand out in the broiling sun of July or August and judge a two-hour game, while watched intently every moment by two keen-eyed managers, thirty or forty players, as familiar with the rules as the indicator holders, and several thousand excited, restless and shouting spectators, every one of whom is anxious to detect some slip in judgment upon the part of the man in blue. Let them labor for that length of time without encouragement, but with shouts of disapproval ringing in their ears at frequent intervals, or have several players step on their toes with their spiked shoes, while making threats and referring in slighting terms to every one connected with them from their remotest ancestry down to the present period, and they will be ready not only to admit but to make affidavit that the umpire actually works.—Leslie's Magazine.

Aerial Tank.

An aerial tank has been invented and put into practical use by Italian soldiers who have astounded the world by their extraordinary feats in mountain warfare. An Austrian machine gun emplacement was so situated on a mountain side that it poured a harassing fire into an Italian post. The Austrian position was unassailable by ordinary means, but it was necessary that it be wiped out. A "Teleferica" car, many of which are operated by the Italians across chasms and up mountain sides, was armored and equipped with machine guns. Volunteers were called for, and from the many who responded two were chosen to man the guns. This improvised aerial dreadnaught was then swung out across the valley. After one or two exploration trips at a dizzy height, the men in the car finally located the Austrian post and quickly put it out of action.

Salvage.

The following letter was written by the wife of a man fighting overseas to a member of the Salvage club, an official organization for preventing war waste:

"Dear Sir: I called at your office on Wednesday at one o'clock, but was told you were engaged on salvage, and that I could not see you. I wanted to ask you about Bert's teeth, what he lost at the front in the mud—do I still have to keep up the payments of them on the installment plan? I feel quite sure that your Salvage club what they talks about would have the matter put right if you would only mention it. Yours respectfully ——."—London Tit-Bits.

Jerusalem Enjoys "Movies."

The moving picture has acquired a sudden and enormous popularity in Jerusalem, particularly among the native population, according to letters from soldiers there. It is impossible to accommodate the crowds that try to attend the theater. People almost fought to get into a big theater when the film depicting the occupation of Beersheba was shown.

People Who Are Too Good.

We have in this world all kinds of organizations for making bad people good and good people better, but I know of none for making too good people—well, let us say, normal. We have all known people who would have been greatly benefited by an occasional "spree," with perhaps a night in jail, but whom no one is courageous enough to corrupt. It is not their fault that they are so good; all the forces of their social circle work to make them more respectable.—Robert M. Gay in the Atlantic Monthly.

Cure For Dysentery

"While I was in Ashland, Kansas, a gentleman overheard me speaking of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes William Whitelaw, of Des Moines, Iowa. "He told me in detail of what it had done for his family, but more especially his daughter who was lying at the point of death with a violent attack of dysentery, and had been given up by the family physician. Some of his neighbors advised him to give Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy, which he did, and fully believes that by doing so saved the life of his child. He stated that he had also used this remedy himself with equally gratifying results."

Army Life At A Training Camp

Mrs. F. S. Bissell, of Westover, has received a long letter from her son, Ted, who is attending a Students Army Training Camp at Plattsburg, N. Y. Young Bissell attended the Washington High School for several years and a part of this letter may be of interest to his schoolmates:

Dear Mother:—We just received our second shot this morning. The man must have been green, for he pushed the needle in like a railroad spike; but the arm feels all right now. We are ordered to keep still this morning. All work is suspended except for the K.P.'s. Some one has to be the goat. K. P. does not stand in this case for Knights of Pythias, but for "kitchen police" or "king (of the) potato." A squad is detailed for K. P. every day, and as there are seventeen squads in the company, each will get it about four times in the two months. Private Bissell got it last Monday. One has to serve this to really learn what war is. It means report at the kitchen at 5 a. m. and work till 8 p. m. At breakfast and supper I waited on tables, at dinner was on the sink. The waiters have to wash the plates, cups, bowles, "silverware" and pitchers at their tables. When on the sink one has to wash about ten hundred pans, kettles and garbage cans. Food is cooked in the last, but they are clean, the mess sergeant sees to it. He is the bane of all K. P.'s lives. The grub is good and plenty of it if you can grab it. We have corn flakes, cream of wheat, grape nuts and bran as breakfast food, with plenty of milk and sugar. Boiled potatoes every meal and usually some kind of meat. They serve ice cream about twice a week, often iced tea. We march to the mess hall and march in; usually leave at will, but sometimes march out; given about twenty minutes to eat.

Last Saturday the officers held inspection—first of arms, then of barracks. Our rifles had to be clean, absolutely; our clothes clean, shoes polished, hair cut well and clean shaven. About two-thirds of the company lost out on the first time and had to appear again, a few the third time. I made it on the second inspection. "What the lieutenants did not see was not there." Every other night we have foot inspection, just before taps. Every one sits on his bunk and sticks his feet out in the aisle, stating his troubles as the officer passes. One goes on sick call to the hospital if the case demands it. The officer often suggests the use of water.

Sunday afternoon two fellows and myself took a walk down the lake about a mile and a-half to a swell hotel. The place is a regular fairyland, only the real thing. We took a trolley car back to camp, reaching there just in time for supper.

Rheumatism Arrested

If you suffer with lame muscles or stiffened joints look out for impurities in the blood, because each attack gets more acute and stubborn.

To arrest rheumatism you must improve your general health and purify your blood; the cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is Nature's great blood-maker while it also strengthens the organs to expel the impurities. Scott's is helping thousands who could not find other relief.

THE GREAT SALISBURY FAIR

—WILL OPEN—

Tuesday, Aug. 20th, 1918

and continue for four consecutive days including FRIDAY, AUGUST 23d

YES, the day will soon be here when the Great Salisbury Fair will again apen its gates to the thousands who annually visit its grounds to see its magnificent program of free entertainment, hotly contested races, its well arranged midway filled with the best attractions; its motorcycle contests famed for years, or the thrilling bursts of speed made on this, the fastest and best track in this section of the country. Those who for many years have made a custom of attending the Great Salisbury Fair well know that they will find there enough to amuse and interest.

These are war times, and every true American citizen is vitally interested in gaining the great contest, and one of the most essential and important things in doing this is the success of this country in providing enough grain and food to feed both ourselves and our noble allies. The management of the Great Salisbury Fair hopes that the meet this year will do much towards helping our farmers, our truckers and our stockraisers in producing more and better grain and stock. A special effort is being made to have our competitive agricultural exhibit complete and of the highest standard. Those who have prize material in their gardens, on their farms, in their poultry yards, or stock barns, are earnestly solicited to forward at once an entry of these to the Secretary of the Fair, so that by their co-operation we may make this exhibit of a character that cannot fail to interest our people in raising better crops and stock. The management has striven this year to place before its patrons an even better class of attractions than ever before. It is impossible in a limited space to list in full the many features of this fair; some of the leading ones are as follows:

FRENCH EXPERTS

This is one of the free attractions, and one that is well worth seeing. It is a novelty performed high in the air, and one which has won for the Three Alex a reputation of country-wide fame. By skillful manoeuvering of poles by one member the others are held high, performing wonderful and sensational tricks.

McDONALD TRIO

LEDEGAR or THE FLYING DUTCHMAN

RACING

There has never been a year in the history of this Fair when the outlook for good horses and spirited racing was better than now. Inquiries for racing blanks haye been received from far-off Michigan even. Those who love a horse and enjoy hotly-contested trotting and pacing races can feel assured that they this year will have as great a treat as they have enjoyed for some time.

MOTORCYCLE RACING

There is nothing that runs on the "good old earth" at such a tremendous rate of speed as a motorcycle. The way that they whirl around a track, taking the curves, is enough to make the most hardened men and women hold their breath, waiting for the spill which every moment seems certain, but which the great skill of these trained riders always succeed in avoiding. We have recognized the great interest that these Motorcycle races create, and have each year devoted more and more of our time and money to making them the best that could be obtained. This year, unusually interesting races have been arranged, and it is prohesied that some of the racers will make record-breaking time on the track.

MIDWAY

Following our custom of the past few years, the Midway upon the Great Salisbury Fair grounds will be furnished by a large and responsible booking company of New York City. This company has arranged for a goodly number of the various kinds of shows usually seen on a Midway. These shows will be amusing, interesting and decent.

Despite war times, bringing with it an increased cost of running everything, the price of admission at the Fair will not be increased but remain as it has been for years, as follows: 25 cents on Tuesday and Friday, and 50 cents on Wednesday and Thursday. Tuesday will be "Children's Day," when all children under 12 years will be admitted free. Friday will be better known as "Home Day," when everyone comes and enjoys the GREAT SHOW at the nominal price of 25 cents.

Be sure and attend this year's Fair. You can't fail to enjoy yourself. Come, bring your families, your friends and your neighbors. Remember the dates!

Murray—Williams Wedding

On Saturday, the 17th instant, Miss Ida Louise Williams, only daughter of Captain and Mrs. W. T. Williams, of Norfolk, Va., was married to Mr. Walter Downs Murray, formerly of Mt. Vernon, but now of Norfolk, Va. The ceremony took place in Lekies Methodist Church, the Rev. Lee G. Crutchfield officiating. The church was decorated with lilies, ferns and palms, and to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, beatifully rendered by Miss Grace Shepherd, the bride walked with her father gowned in ivory satin with a court train embroidered in chenile and silver. Her veil was caught with a spray of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. The bride had as her maid-of-honor and only attendant, Miss Mabel Barger, of Waynesboro, Va. She was gowned in yellow tulle with silver trimmings and carried a shower bouquet of sunset roses.

The bride's brother, Dr. Westley L. Williams, of the University of Virginia, was the best man. Mr. Frank Williams, another brother of the bride, and Mr. Roland Murray, brother of the groom, acted as ushers. Mr. Murray is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Murray. Albert J. Mills Dead

Mr. Albert J. Mills, one of the best known and most highly respected farmers of Dublin district, this county, died at the Eastern Shore State Hospital, at Cambridge, on Sunday morning, the 18th instant. Mr. Mills had been in feeble health for some months and he was taken to the above named institution in the hope of being benefited. His condition became alarming just after he had reached the hospital and he grew gradually worse until death relieved his sufferings at the time above stated. Mr. Mills was a gentleman of the old school and had a long list of friends in his home county who were sorry to hear of his death.

His remains were taken to Pocomoke City and on Monday of last week the funeral services were held in St. Mary's P. E. Church, the rector, Rev. L. L. Williams, officiating. The interment was in the adjoining cemetery.

KILLED IN POWDER EXPLOSION

Allan And William E. Pollitt Among The Victims At Hagley Plant

Last Wednesday afternoon about 4.30 o'clock three workmen were killed at the Hagley yards of the du Pont Powder Company, just above Wilmington, Del., when a building known as a pack house was destroyed by an explosion of black powder, which was being loaded into kegs. The killed are: Allen Pollitt, his cousin, William E. Pollitt and Charles Kimberley, of Montchanin, Del.

Allan Pollitt was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Pollitt, of near Eden, and was 21 years of age. William E. Pollitt, aged 21 years, was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson Pollitt, formerly of Somerset county, but now of Wilmington, Del.

The pack house was an open building about one story and a half in height. When the powder is brought into a building of this type it is completely finished and is ready to be packed into kegs for storage or shipment. It is taken upstairs and run down a hopper, passing into screens and then is separated into bins. It is afterwards run down into the kegs and the kegs sealed. The explosion demolished the building and killed the three men instantly, it is believed. At the time it is estimated that there were 150 kegs of powder in the house, each keg containing about 25 pounds. Beyond destroying the house, the explosion did no other local damage.

Public School Notes

The Board of Education met last Friday afternoon and elected Mr. Fred. H. Dewey, of Jersey City, N. J., as principal of the Princess Anne High School to succeed Mr. E. A. Armistead who had resigned because of the draft of men 18 to 45. Mr. Dewey has fine recommendations. He is about 50 years of age and has a family. The Board also elected Miss Pearl Kneisley, of Middletown, Va., as manual training teacher for the High Schools of Princess Anne and Crisfield. Miss Kneisley has accepted the position.

Miss Mary Lucille Tull, of Marion, was recommended by the superintendent for the principalship of the Marion Central School and was appointed to the position by the Board of Education. The resignation of Mrs. E. T. Landon as trustee of the above school was received and accepted.

The superintendent presented the usual report of the Somerset Board to the State Board of Education, which was inspected and ordered to be sent to its destination.

The Board directed that the white teachers of the county should assemble in Princess Anne on Saturday, October 12th, and the colored teachers on Saturday, November 9th.

The bid of Mr. Frank Thomas to transport pupils in Mount Vernon district was accepted, it being the lowest one. The election of a principal at Marion will obviate the necessity of transportation of pupils to Crisfield. No bids had been received for such transportation, nor have any been received for the transportation from Wellington and King's Creek to Princess Anne.

Letter From Overseas

A letter received August 16th by Mrs. F. S. Bissell, of Westover, from her son, Private Paul F. Bissell, Company B., 312 Machine Gun Battalion, A. E. F., says: "Here I am in a 'peep' tent pitched in a field. We landed this morning and marched two miles to a rest camp where we will stay for a few days.

"Had fine weather coming across, a little rough the first two days, after that I enjoyed the trip very much. One cannot realize until actually crossing, the real vastness of the Atlantic. We sailed for days without seeing any ships except those of the convoy. We carried life belts at all times during the day and slept with them within reach. Had boat drills every day.

"It would be fine here if it were not for the rain. I was talking with a man who has been here four months and he says it rained every day."

Civil Service Examinations

An open competitive examination, under the rules of the United States Civil Service Commission, for the position of clerk and carrier in the postoffice at Princess Anne, will be held on September 7th, 1918, commencing at 9 o'clock a. m.

Applications for this examination must be made on the prescribed form, which, with necessary instructions, may be obtained from the Commission's local representative at the postoffice.

All persons wishing to take this examination should secure blanks and file their applications with L. H. Fisher, Secretary Civil Service Board, Washington, D. C.

ANNUAL MEETING OF CHURCHMEN

Convention Of Christian Churches At Perryhawkin

The convention of the Christian Churches of the Eastern Shore, which was held in the Christian Church at Perryhawkin, August 16th to 18th, was well attended, the church not being large enough to accommodate the large number of people who assembled at each meeting.

Fine speaking and inspiring music made the occasion a most enjoyable one. Dr. B. B. Melton, of Baltimore, was the principal speaker, and Rev. A. W. Gottschall had charge of the singing. Clifton Ryall, U. S. N., presided at the organ. He also made a stirring address, saying that every mother should encourage her sons to enter the service. He said that we should serve God first, and Uncle Sam next. His words were full of love and patriotism. Rev. J. W. West, of Gig, Va., who has many friends in this county, made a splendid address.

Miss Katherine Staub, of Buffalo, N. Y., spoke on the importance of organized class work in the Bible schools.

Rev. S. J. Goode and Rev. C. C. Derrickson planned the convention and it was due to their efforts that the convention was such a great success.

The good women of Perryhawkin outdid themselves in hospitality, and every one spoke in highest terms of the splendid repasts served by them, and of the great kindness shown by them in their homes.

Quite a number of visitors and delegates were present from Baltimore, Ocean View, Fruitland, and Snow Hill. The convention will be held in August of next year in the Christian Church of Fruitland.

Over 30 Die In Tornado

Between 30 and 35 persons were killed and more than 160 were injured by the tornado which struck Tyler, Minn., about 10 o'clock last Wednesday night and tore the town to pieces in a twinkling. Twenty-seven bodies have been identified.

The tornado tore through the heart of the town, sparing only one building, a motion-picture theatre, in which 200 persons were sheltered. The greatest loss of life was in a restaurant. Eighteen persons were in the place when the brick walls collapsed. Sixteen were killed and the other two were seriously injured.

Persons engaged in rescue work said that 125 injured victims was a conservative estimate. In addition to the business places, 40 residences, the hospital, electric light plant and other buildings were destroyed. The storm raged until 11.25 p. m. and dozens of victims were pinioned under debris for two or three hours before being rescued.

It was estimated the property loss would be $1,000,000 at least.

Fishing Fleet Sunk By Raider

Virtually the entire fleet of the Maritime Fish Corporation has been destroyed by the trawler Triumph, which was captured by a German submarine crew and armed, according to reports to the corporation's office at Montreal, Canada, last Wednesday. The fleet was operating off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland. It was composed of boats of both Canadian and American registry. The exact number of vessels destroyed is not known, but the corporation's fleet generally consists of eight or nine vessels.

Absence of any definite report of activity last Thursday on the part of the raider Triumph, the converted steam trawler armed by 16 members of a German U-boat's crew, strengthened the belief held in naval circles at Washington that the vessel is no longer on the North Atlantic fishing grounds.

Nearly 4,000 Men Go This Week

Nearly 4,000 more men will be sent to Camp Meade from this State during this week. They will begin moving today (Tuesday) and continue going in detachments until Saturday. Baltimore city will furnish 1,736 and the counties 2,116.

Here are the quotas for the counties: Somerset, 73; Worcester, 56; Queen Anne, 39; Caroline, 44; Kent, 42; Wicomico, 65; Talbot, 37; Dorchester, 77; Harford, 88; Cecil 61; Carroll, 101; Charles, 32; St. Marys, 33; Prince Georges, 81; Calvert, 24; Allegany, 255; Garrett, 77; Washington, 182; Frederick, 161; Montgomery, 77; Howard, 41; Anne Arundel, 62, and Baltimore county, 408.

On September 6th the state is to assign 291 to limited service, but these must not be taken from among those declared physically qualified for military duty.

The Salisbury Fair was in progress last week, lasting from Tuesday until Friday. The attendance was large and the Fair a great success. A number of our people were present on both Wednesday and Thursday.

BLUE TRIANGLE CAMPAIGN BEGUN

Young Women's Christian Association Needs Money

The week of November 11th has been set as the week during which all patriotic Marylanders, especially those who have sons in the service, or daughters and other relatives doing the war relief work, will be asked to get behind the movement to help the State to raise its quota of the $133,500,000 asked for by four of the great war relief organizations.

During that week, in Maryland as well as all over the country, this union drive of the Young Women's Christian Association, the Young Men's Christian Association, the War Camp Community Service and the American Library Association, will be backed by men, women and children. They will give freely so that when Thanksgiving Day is observed, two weeks later, they can share in its observance with clear consciences.

The blue triangle, the official insignia of the Young Women's Christian Association, will be used as the emblem this Fall for the greatest war drive for women ever held in this country. Fifteen million of the $133,500,000 will be the share of the Y. W. C. A. in this joint war fund.

The National Campaign, which will be for the women a great rallying call to unify the woman power of the country, will be practically the same in every state in the Union. The country has been divided into several great departments, but the call to service will come to the women from State headquarters of their own State.

Miss Florence E. Wilbur, State Organizer of Maryland, will shortly visit this county to outline the work Maryland is expected to do in this campaign.

Sends Message To Maryland Women

By unifying the woman power of the country to back the government in winning the war, the Young Women's Christian Association and the Red Cross offer to the women of America a great opportunity for unselfish and patriotic service, said Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, wife of the Governor of New York, in a message to Maryland women last week.

The support of Marylanders in the big task of mobilizing women to replace men drawn from commercial and industrial work by the selective draft—a task undertaken by the Y. W. C. A.—is urged by Mrs. Whitman.

"The opportunity for unselfish and patriotic service such as has never been ours," said Mrs. Whitman, "has come to every woman. And the splendid response already made by our American womanhood is every assurance that the important work of the Y. W. C. A. is well understood and that the organization will be enthusiastically and loyally supported whatever its needs may be.

"The Girl Who Has Had to Take His Place is working to keep the soldiers' jabs safe for them when they return, and these girls should be protected. The Y. W. C. A. is their protector and as such should be loyally helped by every man and woman in Maryland."

"War Mothers" To Organize

A meeting of a Committee on Recommendations was called by Mrs. Harry G. Skinner, chairman of the Maryland branch of "War Mothers of America," to make final arrangements for a permanent State organization, as a result of the preliminary meeting, held at Y. W. C. A. July 30th. The State meeting is called for Tuesday, September 3rd, 1918, at 10.30 a. m. at Ford's theatre, Baltimore.

It is requested that each person attending this meeting will present a card bearing her name and address, also the name, relationship and organization of soldier or sailor, as a matter of record and to facilitate seating. After the national convention at Evansville, Indiana, September 18, 19 and 20, 1918, separate units will be formed throughout the State. Delegates to this convention will be voluntary.

The object of the organization of "War Mothers of America" is to promote, increase, encourage and co-ordinate the war work of mothers, wives, daughters and sisters of American soldiers and sailors, and to make more effective, by united action, all war work. It is hoped that a large representation will go from every county in the State.

The Rev. Doctor McConnell Coming

The Rev. Dr. McConnell, Rector-Emeritus of "All Soul's" parish, New York City, is coming again. He will be the preacher at St. Andrew's next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. He may also be the preacher at the evening service at 7.30. No one who heard him in June will want to miss hearing him this time. All are most cordially invited to come and take part in the services held during next Sunday.

REPUBLICAN PRIMARY FIGHT

Senator Andrews And Mr. Ward In Congressional Race

Monday of last week was the final day for candidates to file their papers with the Election Supervisors as candidates in the coming primaries for nomination for Congress in the First Congressional District. Hon. Jesse D. Price was the only Democrat to file his papers with the various Boards of Supervisors in the nine counties of the Eastern Shore, and will therefore have no contest for renomination as his party candidate. This was a foregone conclusion after Hon. Omar D. Crothers, of Cecil, decided not to enter the race, and it leaves a clear field for Mr. Price as far as his nomination is concerned.

The same harmony does not seem to exist in the Republican ranks, however, as two candidates have filed their nomination papers in all the counties of the Eastern Shore comprising the First District. The first of these to file was Mr. Augustus Ward, of Crisfield, and it was thought until a very late hour Monday night of last week that he would be the only candidate, but about ten o'clock that night State Senator William Andrews of Dorchester county filed his papers with the Supervisors of the nine counties on the Shore. This will cause the holding of primaries for the Republican nomination, and it is to be regretted, because it was the hope that primary elections this year would be dispensed with, thereby saving the taxpayers thousands of dollars in the First Congressional District. It is estimated that it will cost about $8,000 to a county to hold a primary election, and as there are nine counties in the First District it will be seen how expensive these primaries are to the taxpayers. It is thought that an effort will be made by the Republican leaders to get either Mr. Ward or Senator Andrews to withdraw from the fight before the date for printing the ballots arrive.

Senator Andrews is regarded by many Eastern Shore people as one of the strongest men the Republicans could name against Congressman Price, who will be the Democratic nominee again. Mr. Andrews demonstrated unusual strength in his own county, having defeated Governor Harrington once for State's Attorney, and having won election to the House of Delegates and the State Senate in the face of powerful opposition in his own party, as well as the stiffest opposition the Democrats could give him in the general election.

In the State Senate last winter he had little to say, but he was reckoned one of the shrewdest men on the Republican side. His speech in favor of the Annexation bill, and in support of the Republican party's position on annexation, was considered one of the best delivered in the debate over that question.

Goldsborough Appointed Chairman

Following his unanimous nomination last Tuesday, former Governor Phillips Lee Goldsborough, on Wednesday was appointed chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee of Maryland by George J. Seay, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Va., to succeed H. B. Wilcox, resigned.

The telegram announcing the selection of Mr. Goldsborough was received Thursday morning from Richmond. The new chairman immediately wired his acceptance as follows:

"Acknowledgment is made of your wire of August 21st appointing me chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee of Maryland for the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, upon the unanimous recommendation of the Baltimore Clearing House and Liberty loan representatives vice Henry B. Wilcox, resigned.

"I cheerfully accept, knowing that I will be supported by and having the party co-operation of that splendid corps of officers and workers in Maryland who achieved such splendid success in the past three Liberty loans. Please be assured that this city and State will do their full part toward maintaining and surpassing, if that be possible, the splendid record achieved in previous campaigns in the Fifth Federal Reserve district under your able leadership."

One of the first official acts to be performed by the new chairman was to issue a call for a meeting of the Liberty Loan Committee for Friday afternoon. Mr. Goldsborough is anxious to get the campaign organization in working order, and preliminary steps were taken Friday to map out the hundred and one details of the approaching drive.

Telephone Lineman Killed

John F. Cunningham, a lineman employed by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, of Salisbury, was killed while stringing wires in the southern part of that city last Wednesday. It is supposed that he came into contact with an electric wire and received a shock that either killed him outright or knocked him from the pole, death being caused by the fall. He leaves a widow there.

BOYS' PIG SHOW A GRAND SUCCESS

Somerset Boy Wins Sweepstakes Prize At Pocomoke Fair

The Boys' Thoroughbred Pig Club of Somerset and Worcester counties held a very successful pig show at the Pocomoke Fair. This show was the first registered pig show held in Maryland and probably one of the first of its kind held in the Eastern States. The pigs were quartered in individual pens in a building erected by the Fair officials. The exhibition was one of the features of the Fair, attracting many visitors, who commented favorably on the fine condition of the pigs and the care being given them by the boys.

The pigs were judged by Mr. George R. Hayes, a farmer residing near Princess Anne. Mr. Hayes has specialized, and been successful, in the raising of Duroc Jersey hogs. The following awards were made:

1st—$3.00—Miles Lankford, Somerset.
2nd—$2.00—Lester Norquest, Somerset.
3rd—Subscription to Pennsylvania Farmer—Earl Tull, Worcester.
4th—$1.00—Francis Cluff, Somerset.
5th—$1.00—Philip Mason, Worcester.

1st—$3.00—Fred Bull, Worcester.
2nd—$2.00—Howard Lankford, Somerset.
3rd—Subscription to Pennsylvania Farmer—Preston Mason, Worcester.

Six weeks old class—(2 entered in this class).
1st—$3.00—Obid Mason, Worcester.
2nd—$2.00—Brook Bundick, Worcester.

Male class—(3 entered).
1st—$3.00—Obid Mason, Worcester.
2nd—$2.00—J. Covington, Worcester.
3rd—Subscription to Pennsylvania Farmer—Malcom Matthews, Somerset.

Miles Lankford also won a prize of $1.00 for having the best kept record book and also won the sweekstakes prize of $2.00 for having on exhibition the best pig regardless of age.

The pig winning the sweepstakes prize was born April 11th, registered Duroc, and June 5th, at the start of the contest, the pig weighed 22 pounds, being 7 weeks and 6 days old. The pig was weighed August 15th, age 4½ months, and showed a gain of 68 pounds in ten weeks, weighing 90 pounds on the 15th. This is a gain of very near a pound a day. The pigs are not being fed for weight, but for breeding stock. The gain of 68 pounds was put on the pig at a cost of $5.75, or about 8½ cents per pound gain. The pig's feed consisted in ten weeks of 115 pounds of middlings, skimmed milk, 270 pounds; kitchen refuse, 50 pounds, and two weeks of orchard grass pasture.

This shows what can be accomplished in raising hogs, giving quick returns on capital invested and a quick supply of meat.

The boys were admitted free to the Fair grounds and the prizes for the exhibition were awarded by Dr. Buckley of the State Extension Service, livestock specialist, who gave a short talk to the exhibitors on the care and management of pigs for breeding stock.

The first registered pig show was a success and will be made a permanent feature of the Fair. The work of the boys is very encouraging for the hog industry of the future and promises to make the lower counties on the Eastern Shore of Maryland the center of registered hog breeding.

The show was arranged and managed by County Agent Oswold, of Worcester, and County Agent Keller, of Somerset, the county agents having supervision of the boys club work.

America Must Restock The World

A census of cattle in France reveals a decrease of 17 per cent. in beef animals; 38 per cent. in sheep, and 40 per cent. in hogs since December 31st, 1913. Italy has suffered a loss of 21 per cent. horses, 18 per cent. mules and 8 per cent. swine. No one can even guess what the decrease in Germany, Austria and Russia has been, but it must be enormous. Even in the neutral countries the decrease has been marked, due to increased demands for export. According to a reliable estimate the decrease of livestock in all of Europe is equal to one-half the amount of livestock in America today. This estimate places the loss at 100 million head.

These figures simply go to show the need of conserving and increasing our own breeding stock against the time when America will have to restock the most of the civilized world.

3,333 Brought Home

During the week ending August 16 3,333 sick and wounded soldiers from the American expeditionary forces were brought home, the War Department announced last Thursday. They were sent to the various army hospitals.

Mr. E. Herrman Cohn spent a few days in New York last week.

The Dream House

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

"The hotelkeeper says he is a model young man. At the bank they tell me he has about ten thousand dollars!" said Doctor Doane to his convalescent patient, Ruth Waller.

"What is his name, Doctor?" she inquired.

"Morton Hall. You know he is going to build a bungalow on the lot adjoining your home here."

"Then he has a family?" pressed Ruth, inquisitively.

"I understand not. He is simply putting into effect a cherished plan to have a home built after his own ideas."

It seemed so good to Ruth, after a sick spell of three months, to feel that she was going to get well, that she did not one bit mind the announcement of Doctor Doane that the convalescence meant absolute quiet for a few weeks.

Ruth had a pleasant room, with a double window, and from her couch she could look out upon the garden and beyond it. She had been interested for several days in watching masons put in a cellar of concrete blocks on the next lot. Then that day a young man had appeared, directing the operations of some carpenters. It was pleasant occupation of mind for Ruth to see the framework go up piece by piece. So constantly was the young man she now knew to be Morton Hall in her sight that she felt as if they were almost acquainted.

Ruth noted that her young brother, Ned, had invaded the next yard. Mr. Hall had set some boards so as to coop in the little fellow, had carried a lot of blocks to the inclosure and visited his guest once in a while with kindly word and smile, encouraging him in his game of playing storekeeper.

"See what I got for you!" cried Ned, coming home at dinner time and rushing up to the sick room.

Ruth beamed. She had counted the maiden roses running up over an old trellis on the next lot, had watched them bloom and had expressed a wish for a bouquet of them, and here was Ned with both hands full.

"For me? Oh, Ned! I hope you didn't take them without leave, or beg for them."

"No, I only told Mr. Hall what you said about them, and he told me to take all I wanted, as they were going to take down the trellis."

Ruth flushed a fairer pink than her floral treasures. Her convalescence was certainly proceeding pleasantly. So engrossed was she day after day in watching the house construction progress that she would discuss over and over this and that phase of its architecture with her mother and sister, as though she had a vital share in it all. Ned was present one evening when Ruth made the remark:

"I wonder why Mr. Hall didn't round the porch at this end? That would give him sunlight and the breeze and a view in all four directions."

The day following, towards noon, she became interested in observing that a part of the porch was being removed. Hungry Ned came in at noon with the declaration: "He's going to do it, Ruth—fix the porch the way you said."

"Oh, Ned! You surely didn't mention what I said!" cried Ruth.

"Yes, I did, and Mr. Hall said he was so glad you did, for it just makes things so much nicer.

The day came when the doctor announced that Ruth might spend the pleasantest part of the day in the garden. They wheeled her to the little summer house that had always been a favorite spot with her, reading and sewing. Ruth's eyes danced with pleasure as she found its little table bearing a good jar filled with the choicest treasures of the garden next door.

"You see, I told Mr. Hall you was going to come outdoors," reported Ned, innocently. "Ain't you glad I did, Ruth?"

She was glad and she had an opportunity to thank this thoughtful neighbore before the day was over. He appeared with half a dozen of the latest magazines and a profound apology. He owed her so much for her suggestion about the porch! It was so pleasant to know that some one besides himself was interested in the new house! And before Ruth realized it he had admired her taste in suggesting how the house should be painted.

After that, as Ruth improved daily and was able to go about unaided, the sincere pleasure Mr. Hall evidenced in having her come over and view the building progress brought about a pleasant, mutual companionship. Then her parents and Lois, her sister, had to join "the construction committee," as Mr. Hall jovially termed it. They invited him to supper one evening, and by the time the bungalow was finished he was a regular caller at the Waller home.

"I am afraid I would have bungled things, man-like, if it had not been for your useful suggestions," he told her. "The sitting-room idea—that alcove with the pretty bay window. Just room in the back seat for two, myself and my—well, my wife. Ruth, I've got the house that has been my dream for years, but oh, how lonely it will be unless you fill my fonder vision. Won't you share it with me?"

And Ruth sat down in the window seat, trembling, but happy, and he beside her, and both realized that the full bliss of life was completely theirs.

CURING HAY CROP IN COCK IS BEST

Method Now Generally Practiced Where Best Quality of Legume Is Desired.

EXTRA LABOR IS REQUIRED

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the best methods of curing hay is to cure in the cock. This method is not generally practiced except in regions where unfavorable weather is the rule rather than the exception, or when the best quality of legume hay is desired. Throughout the middle West, where hay loaders are used, hay is not cocked because of the extra labor required and the inability to handle cocked hay with the hay loader.

It has been shown that it is necessary to get rid of the water in the plant evenly. On a sunshiny day hay must be raked after it has been in the swath a certain length of time, or the leaves will become dried out and lose color. When it is raked into the windrow a smaller proportion of the hay is exposed to the action of the sun's rays. After remaining in the windrow, where further curing is done, the time is reached when it becomes necessary to remove the hay in order to retain a good color and aroma.

Cure Hay in Cocks.

When this stage is reached the next thing to do is to put the hay into the cock, where a still smaller proportion of the hay will be exposed to the sun. The curing process is not stopped when hay is cocked, but goes on less rapidly than when in the windrow and much more slowly than when in the swath. The hay in the cock continues to lose its moisture slowly until it is cured out sufficiently to be baled or put into the stack or barn. The time required for curing will depend upon the moisture content when cocked, the amount of hay put into the cock, and also upon weather conditions.

Under ordinary conditions hay will cure in the cock in from three days to a week. Hay cocked too "green" will cause heating. The larger the cock the more danger there is of heating when undercured hay is cocked. Hay is put into cocks containing from 75 to 100 pounds of cured hay. About 100 pounds is the size most commonly used in many sections.

Cloudy and rainy weather not only retards curing but may cause heating if the rain enters the cock. When cocked hay shows danger of becoming too hot it will be necessary to open the cock and scatter the hay out until it has lost enough moisture to be recocked.

Hay can be put in small cocks greener than in large ones. Some farmers take hay from the windrow and make very small bunches, each containing about three forkfuls of hay, before the hay is in condition to be put into a regular sized cock.

How to Cock Hay.

There are two ways to make a hay cock. One is to roll up the hay in the windrow into a rather loose cock or bunch, or to round up (cock) bunches of hay that have been bunched with a sulky or push rake, after the hay is almost cured. The bulk of the hay in this kind of a cock is not handled, being left rolled up and tangled from the action of the rake. The edges are pulled out with a pitchfork and put on top of the cock. Such cocks are subject to considerable settling, and flatten out and do not shed rain. This practice is suitable for curing in good weather, as a man can handle more than twice as much hay as when cocking the other way. It is a waste of time, however, to cock hay in this manner if it is to be exposed to rain, unless hay caps are used; for the rain will wet and spoil the hay.

The best and correct way to build a cock, when working with fairly green hay, is to take the hay, a forkful at a time, and spread it out flat. Care should be taken to build a good, symmetrical cock, in the same manner as a stack is built. The top should come to a sharp peak, and, when the last forkful is on the sides, should be raked downwards so that the stems will cause rain to run off and away from the center of the cock. Cocks built in this manner will shed considerably more rain than when most of the hay is rolled up or bunched. Well-cocked hay covered with caps can, if necessary, remain in the field over a week.

YOU'RE RIGHT, MICKIE! A MAN WHO SNEAKS OUT OF PAYING HIS BACK SUBSCRIPTION BY REFUSING THE PAPER AT THE POSTOFFICE IS A PESKY POLECAT AND AN ORNERY HYENA, BUT STILL IT WAS POOR JUDGMENT FOR YOU TO TELL HIM SO TO HIS FACE, FOR HE FEELS MEAN ENOUGH ALREADY, AND I CAN SUE HIM AND GET THE MONEY.
I CALLED HIM A POOR WARTHOG TOO, BOSS!

Those Dear Girls.

Nell—"I understand May Cutting remarked that I looked so much like Miss Hoamley-Ritch. Isn't that awful?" Belle—"Yes, she's always knocking Miss Hoamley-Ritch, because she's jealous of her."

No Mistaking His Meaning.

Smith was taking his friend out for a drive. The car had the jumps. It balked and bucked and bounced along unsteadily, greatly to the friend's discomfort. They turned into a park boulevard and the friend noted a sign at the side of the road. "Smith, you better not drive on this road," said the friend. "Why?" asked Smith. "Well, that sign says 'Pleasure cars only.'"

A CARELESS DOLL.

The conversation in the lobby of a Washington hotel turned to the subject of dodging responsibility, when this anecdote was fittingly related by Representative Frank D. Scott of Michigan:

Some time since a fond mother returned from an afternoon call and found her five-year-old daughter huddled up in a big armchair, crying bitterly.

"Why, Bessie," exclaimed the mother, taking the little one in her arms, "what in the world is the matter?"

"Somefin dwedful has happened," sobbed the youngster, nestling closer to her mother. "I—I—"

"That's all right, darling," coaxingly responded the mother. "Tell me all about it."

"It was my dolly," was the tearful explanation of Bessie. "She dot away from me and breaked a dish in the pantry."—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

LOGICAL.

"What! You here again for money for a night's lodgin'? Why, I just gave you money for that purpose last night."

Sad.

He's both a coward
And a shirk,
He will not fight
And hates to work.

On Speaking Terms.

When little Ernest was out walking with his mother one day he suddenly pointed to a lady across the road and said:

"Oh, mamma, I know that lady over there! She often speaks to me."

"Does she really, darling?" answered the mother: "And what does she say?"

"She—she—well, she usually says, 'Don't you dare to throw stones at my dog again, you little wretch!'"

Patriotic.

"He's certainly patriotic."

"That so? In what way?"

"He's spending as little money as possible on himself."

"Economizing, eh?"

"Yes. He's even brought himself to the point where he'll wear the neckties his wife's relatives gave him instead of buying new ones."

The Reason.

Lady—Why did you leave your last place?

Maid—Because the lady's husband kissed me.

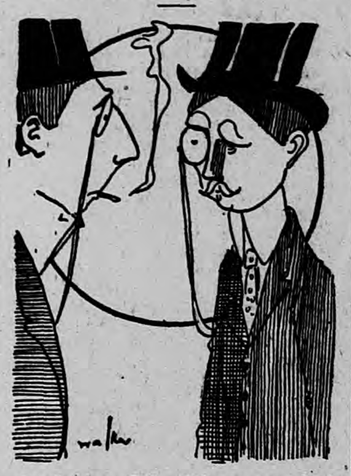
Lady—And didn't you like it?

Maid—Oh, I didn't mind, but the mistress didn't like it.

A Proxy.

A gentleman winked at a bright little boy on the car the other day. The youngster tried to return his salute, but both eyes persisted in shutting. "Mamma," he finally said to a nice looking woman by his side, "wink at that man."

MEAN ADVANTAGE OF HIM.



Lord Algy—Why did you accede to your valet's demands?

Lord Arthur—He threatened to strike and quit just when I was half dressed, you know.

Busy Days.

Considerations we must heed
Which once appeared extraneous.
The coal bin and the icebox need
Attention simultaneous.

Engaging Willie.

The Prospective Office Boy—Is Mr. Richern-Thunder in?

The Stenog—Why, yes, but he is engaged.

The P. O. B.—I should worry. I don't want to marry him; I want a job.

In These Days.

Her Daughter—Mother, what is the "servant problem?"

Mother—How to keep one for two weeks at a time.

HOME TOWN HELPS

TOO FEW ARTISTIC ROADSIDES

In That Respect It Must Be Admitted That the United States Is Far Behind Europe.

The advantage and pleasure to be derived from an artistic roadside seem so apparent that it would appear unnecessary to comment on the matter, but when we travel about and see our highways with their bordering improvements we are forced to the conclusion that the appearances are not sufficiently appreciated.

Streets of the usual box-type of clapboard houses may be found in and about most of our cities. That they are devoid of any artistic conception is particularly proved when we contrast them with the roadsides which may be seen in charming variety throughout the most progressive European countries.

In countries where the general surroundings are so artistic it becomes the natural habit to follow the prevalent examples, so that the idea when once started has a natural growth.

Architectural design may be artistically and economically applied to all classes of buildings, notwithstanding the general opinion that such thought is only applicable to expensive construction. When we arrive at a proper appreciation of the artistic roadside we will not hesitate to insist on architectural treatment of all construction work of whatever class.

EASILY MADE RUSTIC SEAT

Limb of Felled Tree Quickly Converted Into Useful and Ornamental Addition to Yard.

It was merely as a matter of convenience that the largest limb of a tree which was felled, was sawed off nearer the ground than were the two smaller branches. However, this at once suggested a seat, which was very easily made. A piece of board was placed on the large stump and a simple back made of cross poles with vertical slats nailed to them, was fastened between the two smaller limbs. With the bark removed and the surface coated with a dull green paint the seat harmonizes with the surroundings.—Popular Science Monthly.

Shape of This Tree Made Simple Task to Construct a Seat From Its Stump.

TO HARMONIZE WITH HOUSE

Grounds Surrounding Structure Must Be Laid Out Solely With That Object in View.

The garden surrounding a residence must harmonize with the structure. If the latter be a palace the grounds should have palatial treatment; if a simple cottage or bungalow of modest appearance, a quiet, simple, almost rustic scene may be made to surround the domicile. This argument may be followed out to its natural conclusion by the thought (or statement) that if one inhabits a natural cave no gardening would be necessary or even advisable. Soaring from this basis to the other extreme, it will readily be seen that a magnificent home must have liberal and harmonious treatment or it, as well as the grounds, must suffer. Large residences of pretentious or classical architecture should be at once planted about with a certain amount of large and pretentious trees.

Would Let Cities Build Houses.

A bill has been introduced in the legislature at Albany, N. Y., permitting the larger cities of the state to purchase land and construct houses, the purpose being to relieve the great shortage of homes that exists in many cities. Massachusetts has been the pioneer in this state construction work.

The Solo Hop.

The late Capt. Vernon Castle was very popular with the flying cadets under him. No teacher of flight was ever more affectionately regarded.

Captain Castle had a cheery way with him. A cadet one morning awaited rather nervously in the flying field his "solo hop," as the first flight alone is called. Captain Castle, noticing the cadet's perturbation, slapped him gaily on the shoulder and said:

"Cheer up, man. Don't be nervous. You'll come down again. There's no known instance of an airplane ever failing to come down."

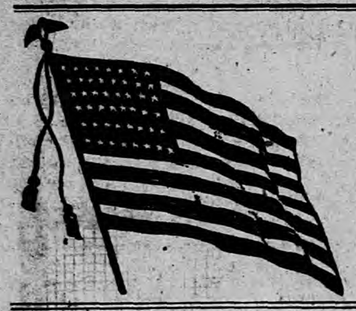
TUESDAY MORNING, AUG. 27, 1918



The proposed taxes on soda water and soft drinks are declared by the girls to be class legislation.

Girls are harvesting potatoes in many sections. This should promote the "back to the soil" movement among the young men.

The Germans claim our troops are all tired out. If so it must have been because they had to run so fast to keep up with the retreating Huns.

This is the season of reunions. If you don't come in anywhere, you can get up an association of people whose names all begin with the same letter.

The President is going to be taxed $24,000 a year on his salary, but it is believed he can get along without having to rent rooms in the White House.

A nation-wide campaign to raise more sheep is reported. The first thing to be done is to convert a considerable number of mongrel dogs into sausage.

American troops, says a German expert, are better on the attack than on the defensive. But they don't seem to be having to use the defensive much.

People who kick on the scarcity of meat may be reminded that it is because such big shipments are being made to our allies who still bear the brunt of the war.

Judging by the scarcity of teachers, there are still many school boards who can't see why a school marm isn't willing to work for her board and half the cost of her clothes.

The boys who leave school with insufficient education to take advantage of high wages, will be the ones who by and by are complaining that they never had any luck in the world.

The Germans are not bothered about our proposed army of 5,000,000 Americans as Kaiser Bill says our census figures are padded and there aren't that number of men in the United States.

WATCHING THE CASUALTY LISTS

These are hard and anxious days for thousands of homes in this country. Their boys may be in the thick of the fighting. Every day they take up the newspaper with dread, fearing to see there the beloved name. Or they tremble as the telegraph messenger approaches the door lest he bear ill tidings.

It is a proof of the essential nobility of human nature that our people have risen to it so well. Few are complaining. What they suffer they keep to themselves. They feel if the boy can stand the shock and the ghastly sights of battle we at home can do our part of silent suffering. So our people have grown stronger as the war has gone on.

The American people have descended into the valley of the shadow. Let them remember the words of the Book, "Thy rod and Thy staff shall comfort me." There is a higher power above that sees and knows all. He will succor and strengthen in his good time.

CARING FOR TREES

Tree growth is one of the essentials of beauty in a town or a neighborhood. The selling value of real estate can be greatly enhanced by tree cultivation. But many people seem to think they can stick trees into the ground and have them grow without any further attention. Out in the country where there is plenty of air and sunlight and water they will prosper without trouble. But place them in a town where their roots lie largely under macadam streets and concrete walks and they are going to lack their proper supplies of moisture.

The fall is an excellent time of year to inspect trees and see if they are suffering. In the spring if a tree has any life at all it will look well. In the fall, after it has encountered the strain of summer weather, it will show weakness. Falling leaves will show if a tree is having a battle for existence. Such trees may need protection from insects another season, or possibly they need regular watering, to help them live under difficult conditions.

No matter how much money is spent on a house it will never seem like a real home unless it has trees around it to screen it and soften its outlines and give contrast. A healthy tree is a constant source of pleasure. Now is the time to look your trees over and see whether they are needing any special care.

THE WAR BRIDES

These are days when many marriages are occurring in haste. Sudden calls to soldiers result in a sudden determination of the soldier and his sweetheart to wed before his departure. Frequently but a few days is taken to get ready for the fateful step. The frills and furbelows of fashionable weddings are absent. There are neither bridesmaids nor ushers. Probably the bridegroom and the father-in-law are secretly pleased to escape a lot of obnoxious formalities. The brides perhaps feel a little pang at missing the customary celebrations.

Many cautious people feel that a lot of these marriages are undertaken very impulsively, with little thought about the fitness of the union, and that when the soldier returns the wedded life may not be happy. It means in some cases that the bride must soon be a widow, with the burden of a child to bring up and educate.

This is no time for sudden sentimental attachments and love at first sight kindled by the fascination of a uniform. Soldiers have always had a traditional power over girls. There is something about their garb and carriage and assurance that the feminine heart can not resist. Marriages of that kind give little promise of permanence. The girl so easily won may in the absence of her husband be lost with equal speed.

Where young people have known each other well and have fully resolved to marry, it would seem well to set aside some of the ordinary considerations of cool prudence. Otherwise the girl would have many regrets in the sad case that he did not return.

It will be a comfort to the boy in the trenches that she is finally his and both of them will bear the separation better. He may return not fully able to earn the kind of living the girl is accustomed to. But life is full of risks that must be taken. If the girl has the soldier spirit, they will make their way.

BUILDING ON LIES

During many centuries of experience the world has gradually come to the conclusion that truth and honesty are the only sure foundation. Liars do not usually fare well.

International relations have gradually been coming to the same basis. Modern governments have not usually broken treaties with the cheerful ease of former periods. They realize that they must make good on their promises, if future words are to have any effect.

Consequently the faithless violation of all pledges by the German government ignores all human experiences. It defies the standards of honor that we have built up through a long struggle. It promises the Russians peace without annexations and indemnities, then goes in and seizes great portions of their territory and demands a vast indemnity. It broke its solemn pledges to Belgium, and then massacred its men and raped its women because they had spirit enough to resist.

All through this war it has built its hopes of victory on lies. It started the war and then claimed it was attacked. It appeals to the terror of its ignorant soldiers by telling them that if taken prisoner they will be subject to barbaric cruelties and death.

Can a nation succeed that thus defies the whole experience of the human race and all the standards of honor, truth and justice? There are a good many of us who would like to migrate to some other sphere of existence if lies are to trample on truth and run the world.

"Truth is mighty and will prevail," is no mere doctrine of closest philosophers. It is the experience of the ages. What has been in the past will be again. No government founded on lies has lived yet. It is not likely that the Hun power can upset all the course of human history.

For The Next Liberty Loan

Former Governor Goldsborough is being made to pay the penalty for his excellent work as chairman of the Liberty Loan Speakers' Committee. His energy and enthusiasm in that position pointed to him as the logical successor to Mr. Wilcox to lead the next Liberty Loan campaign.

Of course, Mr. Goldsborough will appreciate the honor, but he also knows well the weight of the burden he assumes. It is not a one-man job. The best he can do is to bring home to every individual his duty to subscribe to the next loan to the full extent of his means. The measure of his success will depend upon how seriously the individual understands that this is his war; that he must pay without grudging, pay without being solicited to pay, pay promptly and work for the loan in every direction in which he can be useful.

It should be borne in mind that the leader of the campaign has exactly the same interest in it as has any other citizen. He is not remunerated for his work. He gives his time and labor as well as his money. In the weeks that will elapse before he calls upon the people of Maryland to respond to the Government's appeal the citizens of the State should prepare to answer in full measure. We boast of our desire to push the war to a victorious conclusion at the earliest possible moment. And yet for many thousands there is but one way in which they can help to do it. That is by taking the Government's bonds, its promise to pay at a high rate of interest in return for money advanced it. Surely that is not a heavy tax on our patriotism.

It should not take a month's campaign to carry Maryland over the top of its allotment, and it will not take a month if the public sets about the task in the right spirit.—Baltimore News.

Why Not End It In 1919?

The French and the British, with American troops probably fighting with each, are still hammering away at the "invincible" German armies, and steadily pushing them back. The gains in miles and in prisoners are significant. Overwhelming disaster has not yet come upon the "retreatists," but they are losing steadily and continuously. The irresistible force of the Allied tide is sweeping them away. Their military anchors will no longer hold.

The war is not over; but our innings have begun, and we are piling up a mighty score that is throwing the shadow of sure defeat upon the Hohenzollern crowd. Like John Paul Jones, we have just begun to fight; but, unlike him, we are at the beginning of our strength, not near its end. The enemy is war-worn, weary and growing weaker every day. His war of aggression is over; ours has started and will not be stopped.

Premier Clemenceau of France agrees with General March that we can bring the war to an end next year. Whether we do so or not depends upon how earnestly we back up General Foch. Let's get in the push and celebrate Christmas, 1919, in Berlin.—Baltimore Sun.

The Two Girls

To the American soldier at the front, fighting for the life and liberty of the world, the Youg Women's Christian Association stands for two girls—The Girl He Left Behind Him and The Girl Who Took His Place. In a highly personal sense does it represent the girl he left behind him, for, by sending girls to France to work in the Young Men's Christian Association huts, it sends to the soldier all the sweetness, the softening influences of the American girl; by helping its members into Red Cross work overseas it carries to the wounded boys the tender ministrations of those who care for the spiritual, mental and physical welfare of the soldiers just as the latter's own sweethearts and wives would. The American in France need not lose the influence of the Girl He Left Behind Him, even if she cannot be with him in person. Equally as important to the fighting man in the trenches is The Girl Who Took His Place, for, as more men from all walks of life enter the training camps and go over to the battle fronts, so more and more girls and women will enter industrial and commercial positions, doing work they have never done before. Their protection in their new environments is necessary. Over them the Young Women's Christian Association unfolds a protecting wing, holding them safe as they prevent the upset of business conditions so as to make the United States as it was before the war. This maintenance of business conditions is necessary if the men, when they come marching home in triumph, are to find conditions as nearly normal as possible to make or keep them. Our hats are off to The Two Girls.—The Baltimore Star.

A Bilious Attack

When you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take three of Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. They only cost a quarter.

We have also a full stock of Atlas Pure Ready-Mixed Paint. Every gallon of both grades is guaranteed. HAYMAN'S HARDWARE DEPT.

THERE IS A MATERIAL DIFFERENCE.—Some ice receptacles are built to sell and all that can be said of them is the price. In many instances the manufacturer, or seller, is not heard from any more. You have probably noticed that standard merchandise does not get into such hands, and is handled only by reliable merchants. We desire to call your attention to our line of Baldwin Dry-Air Refrigerators, which we have handled for fifteen years, our sales increasing each year. If you want to know about the merit of this line ask the users how their ice bill compares with those using other makes. Our stock is complete. Prices in keeping with quality. Would be glad to show you through the line.

AMERICANS ASKED TO LIMIT USE OF SUGAR

Must Use No More Than Two Pounds Per Person a Month if the Present Meagre Allied Sugar Ration Is Maintained.

Stocks Will Be Short Until Beginning of New Year—Ration May Be Enlarged Then.

Two pounds of sugar a month—half a pound a week—that is the sugar ration the U. S. Food Administration has asked every American to observe until January 1, 1919, in order to make sure there shall be enough for our Army and Navy, for the Allied armies and for the civilians of those nations.

By New Year's the world sugar situation will be relieved somewhat by the new crop. Cuban sugar of this year's crop will be arriving in this country.

Every available sugar source will be drawn on by the Food Administration during the next winter months to maintain sufficient stocks here to keep up our national sugar supply. During October the first American beet sugar will arrive in the markets. By the middle of November some of our Louisiana cane crop will be available. All of this sugar and more may be needed to keep this nation supplied on a reduced ration and to safeguard the Allied sugar ration from still further reduction. In Europe the present ration is already reduced to a minimum.

Our Situation.

The situation which the United States faces in its efforts to maintain a fair distribution of sugar to the Allied world is as follows:

Sugar supplies throughout the country, in homes, stores, factories and bakeries are at a low ebb. We must make increased sugar shipments to the Allies.

Production of American beet and Louisiana cane crops have been disappointing.

Porto Rico crops have been curtailed.

Immense sugar stocks in Java cannot be reached on account of the shipping shortage; ships are needed for troop movements and munitions.

Army and Navy sugar requirements have increased as well as those from the Allies.

Most industries using sugar have had their allotment reduced by one-half; some will receive no sugar.

Households should make every effort to preserve the fruit crop without sugar, or with small amounts of sugar. Later, when the sugar supply is larger, the canned fruit may be sweetened as it is used.

French Sugar Mills Destroyed

France must import sugar today, most of it from this side of the ocean, because the largest portion of French sugar beet land is in German hands. As a result, the French people have been placed on a sugar ration of about 18 pounds a year for domestic use; a pound and a half a month. This photograph shows how the German troops destroyed French sugar mills. Thanks to the French rationing system the annual consumption has been cut to 600,000 tons, according to reports reaching the United States Food Administration. Before the war France had an average sugar crop of about 750,000 tons of sugar and had some left over for export.

Saving Sugar Saves Shipping

UNLOADING HAWAIIAN SUGAR AT A CALIFORNIA PORT.
LOADING CANE IN HAWAII FROM WHERE AMERICA GETS HALF A MILLION TONS OF SUGAR A YEAR.

AMERICAN families would have less sugar than the people of war torn France, if we depended entirely on our home-grown sugar stocks.

Approximately 75 per cent. of our sugar is shipped to our shores. We produce about 1,000,000 tons of sugar a year. Our imports from abroad amount to over 3,000,000 tons a year in normal times.

The United States Food Administration asks each family to limit its use of sugar to two pounds per month per person for household use. The military situation demands that every available ship be placed at the disposal of the Army or Navy. When we save sugar, we save shipping.

WAR HELPED ZINC INDUSTRY

Remarkable Impetus Given to the Mining and Refining of the Mineral in Japan.

The high-water mark in the development of zinc mining and refining in Japan has been reached since the outbreak of the present war. Zinc was first mined in a commercial way in 1897, but even as late at 1911 the output was still only about 10,000 tons. The refining of the ores was not started on a large scale until 1914. The rising quotations of the metal in all markets gave the industry great impetus in Japan, so that in 1915 21,000 tons of refined goods and in 1916 45,000 tons were produced. It is estimated that the production in 1917 totaled some 65,000 tons. It is said that the refineries can produce as high as 100,000 tons a year, but as this takes some 250,000 tons of zinc ore the problem before Japan is to obtain 200,000 tons of ore in foreign markets, as only 50,000 tons are mined in Japan. In the past Japan has bought ore from China, Australia and Russia, the greater part of the ore, however, coming from Australia. It has been reported that Great Britain plans a refinery in Australia in order to produce zinc in that portion of her empire. If true, this, it is said, may force Japan to seek her raw material in some other market.

Few Non-Italian Popes.

A majority of the popes have been Italians, but there is no national limitation. Pope Clement II, for example, was a Saxon German, whose family name was Suidger; Clement IV was a Frenchman named Leo Gros; Clement V was a Frenchman named d'Agoust; Clement VI was another Frenchman named Pierre Roger; Alexander VI was a Spaniard, named Borgia; Calixtux II was a Frenchman and Calixtux III was a Spaniard named Borgia and was uncle to Alexander VI. These are a few examples of non-Italian popes.

Germany's Oldest Railroad.

The oldest railroad in Germany is one of the shortest in the world. The Ludwig railway, connecting the cities of Furth and Nurenburg, is just three and three-quarters miles long, and has never been extended. It was conceived by Johannes Scharrer, a wealthy hop merchant, the Philadelphia Inquirer tells us. The plan was first published in 1832, and as King Ludwig favored its construction it was named after him. There are about 90 employees. The railroad carries about 4,000,000 passengers a year.

Air Plants.

In some parts of Mexico "air plants" abound. These curious growths are never attached to the soil in any way, but rely for their moisture on the atmosphere. One kind, known as "Spaniard's beard" (Tillandsia usneoides), attaches itself to telephone wires. Very often the growth becomes a positive nuisance, and it is necessary to send men to clear it away. The "Spaniard's beard" has no proper leaves, and in appearance is simply a mass of green-gray threads.—Wide World.

The hutspot of Holland is still made after the manner of the one left by the Spaniards who cooked this dish over their campfires the day in October long ago when they were driven by the Hollanders over the dykes and out of their country. The stew resembles our "mulligan" of the Northwest and the pepperpot of the West Indies, only the latter has crab meat and dumplings added.

Sublime Confidence!

Clair, like most small boys, was much interested in anything that took place. At this particular time his grandfather happened to be tending his bees. After being repeatedly told that he would get stung if he didn't stand back, one of the guests said: "Don't you know you'll get stung if you are not careful?" He said: "Aw, I ain't afraid. They know me."

Not for Me, but of Me.

Moses Selig has been in business for a long time but never until recently had he received a purely business letter from a small granddaughter. The letter was sent by his granddaughter, Evelyn Hahn, who formerly lived in Indianapolis, and was as follows:

"Dearest Grandpa: This is a business note. . . . I am selling Thrift Stamps and War Savings Stamps. Please buy of me, not for me, and help me to receive a position in the army of thrift workers. Send me a check if you will, payable to cash, and I will send you the stamps. You will oblige and help me very much. Much love.

"EVELYN."

It is needless to say that Mr. Selig regarded this as one of the most important business notes he ever received.—Indianapolis News.

An American aviator, forced to land within the German lines and taken prisoner, returned a few days afterward to American headquarters, safe and sound, in his own machine.

The commanding German officer informed him they were after certain information and had decided to send him up in his own machine accompanied by a German officer, who would shoot him if he deviated from orders.

He took his machine up, his German companion sitting beside him with a drawn revolver at his ribs.

He said: "I determined that the German officer should never return, even if it cost me my own life. I was thinking how I could do it, when I realized that the man beside me was not strapped in. I looped the loop."

OUR SAVED FOOD FED THE ALLIES

Food Administrator Writes President America Conserved 141,000,000 Bushels Wheat.

CREDIT DUE TO WOMEN.

Meat and Fat Shipments Increased by 844,600,000 Pounds.

Conservation measures applied by the American people enabled the United States to ship to the Allied peoples and to our own forces overseas 141,000,000 bushels of wheat and 844,600,000 pounds of meat during the past year, valued in all at $1,400,000,000. This was accomplished in the face of a serious food shortage in this country, bespeaking the wholeheartedness and patriotism with which the American people have met the food crisis abroad.

Food Administrator Hoover, in a letter to President Wilson, explains how the situation was met. The voluntary conservation program fostered by the Food Administration enabled the piling up of the millions of bushels of wheat during 1917-18 and the shipment of meat during 1917-18.

The total value of all food shipments to Allied destinations amounted to $1,400,000,000, all this food being bought through or in collaboration with the Food Administration. These figures are all based on official reports and represent food exports for the harvest year that closed June 30, 1918.

The shipments of meats and fats (including meat products, dairy products, vegetable oils, etc.,) to Allied destinations were as follows:

Fiscal year 1917-18....3,011,100,000 lbs.

Increase ..... 844,600,000 lbs.

Our slaughterable animals at the beginning of the last fiscal year were not appreciably larger than the year before and particularly in hogs; they were probably less. The increase in shipments is due to conservation and the extra weight of animals added by our farmers.

The full effect of these efforts began to bear their best results in the last half of the fiscal year, when the exports to the Allies were 2,133,100,000 pounds, as against 1,266,500,000 pounds in the same period of the year before. This compares with an average of 801,000,000 pounds of total exports for the same half years in the three-year pre-war period.

In cereals and cereal products reduced to terms of cereal bushels our shipments to Allied destinations have been:

Fiscal year 1916-17..259,900,000 bushels
Fiscal year 1917-18..340,800,000 bushels

Increase ..... 80,900,000 bushels

Of these cereals our shipments of the prime breadstuffs in the fiscal year 1917-18 to Allied destinations were: Wheat 131,000,000 bushels and of rye 13,900,000 bushels, a total of 144,900,000 bushels.

The exports to Allied destinations during the fiscal year 1916-17 were: Wheat 135,100,000 bushels and rye 2,300,000 bushels, a total of 137,400,000 bushels. In addition some 10,000,000 bushels of 1917 wheat are now in port for Allied destinations or en route thereto. The total shipments to Allied countries from our last harvest of wheat will be therefore, about 141,000,000 bushels, or a total of 154,900,000 bushels of prime breadstuffs. In addition to this we have shipped some 10,000,000 bushels to neutrals dependent upon us, and we have received some imports from other quarters.

"This accomplishment of our people in this matter stands out even more clearly if we bear in mind that we had available in the fiscal year 1916-17 from net carry-over and as surplus over our normal consumption about 200,000,000 bushels of wheat which we were able to export that year without trenching on our home loaf," Mr. Hoover said. "This last year, however, owing to the large failure of the 1917 wheat crop, we had available from net carry-over and production and imports only just about our normal consumption. Therefore our wheat shipments to Allied destinations represent approximately savings from our own wheat bread.

"These figures, however, do not fully convey the volume of the effort and sacrifice made during the past year by the whole American people. Despite the magnificent effort of our agricultural population in planting a much increased acreage in 1917, not only was there a very large failure in wheat, but also the corn failed to mature properly, and our corn is our dominant crop.

"I am sure," Mr. Hoover wrote in concluding his report, "that all the millions of our people, agricultural as well as urban, who have contributed to these results should feel a very definite satisfaction that in a year of universal food shortages in the northern hemisphere all of those people joined together against Germany have come through into sight of the coming harvest not only with wealth and strength fully maintained, but with only temporary periods of hardship.

"It is difficult to distinguish between various sections of our people—the homes, public eating places, food trades, urban or agricultural populations—in assessing credit for these results, but no one will deny the dominant part of the American women."

A hoarder is a man who is more interested in getting his bite than in giving his bit.

WHY ENGLAND HONORS HOOVER ---KEPT WOLF FROM DOOR

"The war is over—we are beaten," the British food controller is reported to have exclaimed when told the U. S. had already shipped its whole surplus of wheat. Britain at the beginning of the year was consuming half a million tons of food each month more than the margin of safety permitted. America then—not just the Government but the loyal American people—saved the day. The danger of Britain being starved out of the Allied Camp was averted till next summer at all events. The problem now is to build up a reserve so that no risk may again be run and the whole national energy thrown into the job of "getting on with the war."

If the United States had gone selfishly ahead, eating wheat as usual, and not saving in export meats, actual starvation might have faced the people of the United Kingdom before now. Fortunately, Mr. Hoover's masterful organizing genius was getting results, and the breakdown in transportation in the United States was gradually remedied. The American people have saved out of their domestic supply of wheat about 100,000,000 bushels, and likewise have enabled the Food Commissions to export far more meat, in the last six months, than was originally expected. In April, exports of bacon were nearly 100,000 tons, compared with 11,000 tons in April, 1917.

Having performed such splendid service in conjunction with Lord Rhondda, Mr. Hoover is fully entitled to the exceptional honors showered on him in England.

This splendid achievement, in which the people of Maryland played their full share, does not mean that wheat thrift can now cease. Efforts must not be relaxed. Next summer, if the war still lasts, the United States will again have the responsibility of keeping fed the armies and civilized population of the Allies whose man-power long ago was removed from the fields to the trenches. No chances can be run unless all the sacrifices of the past are to count for naught. A reserve must be built up. Therefore it is not possible that there should be here any material modifications in the wheat regulations.

Give up fried food; save the fats to defeat the Kaiser. A certain amount of fat each day is necessary to human life. Don't waste an ounce; it means the life of someone somewhere in the world.

Send It To Our Boys.

Saving wheat is a military necessity!

Will you permit appetite or habit to take precedence over patriotism and duty?

Eat no wheat!

COTTAGE CHEESE IS CHEAP

A saving of $30,000,000 worth of valuable food is sought in the campaign which the United States Food Administration and the Department of Agriculture have launched to curtail this country's enormous waste of skim milk. Agents are working from Atlantic to Pacific, calling attention to the score of palatable forms in which this nutritious commodity can be prepared.

In its most familiar form it bobs up as Cottage Cheese, which is equal to meat in food value. One pound of cottage cheese is as good as a dozen eggs.

In many cities milk distributors are sending their cottage cheese around on their routes, and the housewife is able to place her order for it along with the milk.

Sugarless Meringue.
(Official recipe.)

One cup corn or maple syrup. White of two eggs.

Method: Boil the syrup slowly until it makes a soft ball when dropped in cold water. Add this gradually to the stiffly-beaten whites of eggs, beating constantly. Spread this on pudding or pie and brown slightly in a slow oven.

Owing to the lateness of the new potato crop, the Berlin authorities have reduced the midsummer potato ration from three pounds to one each week. Some beans and peas are being added to what householders may obtain.

Drought, wind, and heat have played havoc with the Western Canadian wheat crop and from a section of this continent which was expected to contribute 300,000,000 bushels to the Allied food supply less than 200,000,000 bushels is now counted on.

Mary had a little lamb with which she used to play, but her brother feeds a little pig to fight the meatless day.

RIPE FRUIT NEEDS LESS SUGAR.

It is suggested to the patriotic housewife that it is better to pay a few cents more for fruit that is fully ripened and that does not require sugar (or at most a very little) than to purchase sour, small fruit that must be either cooked with sugar or deluged with it, when served in its natural freshness, to render it palatable. Remember that every housewife must take for her slogan just now: "Every little bit helps."

Add the leftover cheese to your cream soups. Two or three tablespoonfuls will improve the flavor of any soup.

There is no slacker more offensive to the patriotic eye than an empty jam jar. Fill it quickly with something that cannot be sent to our soldiers, if only to empty and fill it again before snow flies.

SLOUCH HAT OUT OF FAVOR

Picturesque Headgear No Longer Worn by American Soldiers on the Fighting Fronts.

The slouch hat has for many years been regarded in Europe as distinctively American, although for as many years it has been no more commonly worn in the United States than in the British isles, and over a considerable part of the continent. Nevertheless, the typical American is almost invariably pictured in a soft hat, and the soft felts worn by the soldiers of the American expeditionary forces to France helped to sustain the tradition. In the Civil war the soldiers of the North wore caps. Soft felts were chosen for soldiers operating against the Indians on the plains because they were supposed to afford greater protection than caps from the glare. They became a regulation head covering for the army in the Spanish-American war, and, because they matched the khaki uniform, they have been in use ever since. Now, however, General Pershing is said to have decided that these hats must be discarded in favor of brimless and peakless caps, and the reason for the proposed change is characteristic of the period that has introduced into war so many innovations. The rim of the soft felt hat throws a shadow on the periscope used in the trenches so as to interfere with sighting by the wearer; also, when worn by tall men, the crown may be seen above the parapets by the enemy; also, a gas mask can be adjusted much more quickly over a brimless and peakless cap.

Speed Indicators.

A useful instrument, especially in clouds, is the air speed indicator. This tells the pilot his speed through the air. It also helps him to know whether he is rising or descending. For instance, if the speed of the machine flying level is 100 miles an hour, any speed registered above that will show that the machine is coming down, and anything below it that the machine is climbing. The difference in speeds will show to what extent the craft is descending or climbing. There is also a proper fore-and-aft level to indicate climb and descend, but for various technical reasons the pilot usually depends on the air speed indicator.

Housefly Can Move Fast.

A housefly is not by inclination much of a traveler. But, when it wants to travel, it goes fast. Experiments have shown that, when pushed, it can cover 160 feet per second, or about 110 miles an hour straightaway.

Origin of Hungarian Race.

The Hungarians, or Magyars, constitute a branch of the Finno-Ugrian race, their nearest of kin being the Finus of Finland. The Hungarians have been settled in their present country of Hungary for more than 1,000 years. They came from the vast plains of western Siberia, their original home, toward the close of the eighth century.

DO IT NOW

Princess Anne People Should Not Wait Until It Is Too Late

The appalling death rate from kidney disease is due largely to the fact that the little kidney troubles are usually neglected until they become serious. The slight symptoms often give place to chronic disorders and the sufferer may slip gradually into some serious form of kidney complaint.

If you suffer from backache, headaches, dizzy spells; if the kidney secretions are irregular of passage and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. Help the kidneys at once.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for kidney disorders—they act where others fail. Over one hundred thousand people have recommended them. Here's a case at home:

Mrs. H. B. Wherrett, Antioch avenue extended, Princess Anne, says: "I had been troubled nearly all my life with kidney trouble and had severe backaches at times. If I did anything that made me stoop over, I suffered with severe pains through the small of my back, especially when I straightened up. At times I could see little black specks and flashes of color in front of my eyes. During the last attack I used one box of Doan's Kidney Pills and I have had no further trouble. I cannot recommend this medicine too highly."

Maryland And The Liberty Loans

While Maryland subscribed in larger proportion to the Third Liberty Loan than any other State in the Fifth Reserve District, its record was not as good in over-subscriptions as some of the other States, but what it lacked in this respect, it more than made up in per capita subscriptions.

Maryland's apportionment of the first loan was $30,000,000 minimum, $35,000,000 maximum and total subscriptions amounted to $37,018,750 or $2,018,750 over-subscriptions.

In the second loan Maryland was apportioned $39,000,000 minimum, $65,000,000 maximum and subscriptions amounted to $54,343,300 or $10,656,700 less than the maximum.

There was no maximum apportionment for the third loan.

Maryland's share of that loan was $38,259,000 and subscriptions totaled $48,729,300 or $10,470,000 more than its allotment.

Subscriptions in all the States comprising the Fifth District were larger by $91,413,350 for the second loan than for the first due, no doubt, to the intensive educational campaign conducted especially to impress upon the wage earner the importance of practicing thrift and investing the savings in Liberty Bonds.

While total subscriptions in the Fifth District for the third loan were nearly $14,000,000 less than for the second, they exceeded the first loan by $76,520,680. Subscriptions for the entire Fifth District for the first Liberty Loan amounted to $109,738,000; for the second loan $201,151,700. Subscriptions for the third loan exceeded the apportionment by $56,259,030.

Many subscribers to the first and second loans contented themselves with the belief that they had done their full duty and refrained from subscribing to the third loan.

Every effort will be made during the fourth loan campaign to impress upon recalcitrants that it is their duty to subscribe to the limit of their ability to every loan floated by the United States.

It is estimated that one out of every 5½ persons in Maryland bought a bond of the third issue. In Baltimore City it is estimated that one in every 2.8 of the white population bought a bond. The total number of subscribers in the State, including Baltimore City, was 253,916 of whom 177,438 were residents of the city and 76,478 were residents of the county. Only the District of Columbia exceeded Maryland in per capita subscriptions. The per capita subscriptions for the State, outside of Baltimore City, was $15.93, while that for the city was $59.65, making the total for the whole State $34.51. The District of Columbia per capita subscriptions was $65.00; Virginia $20.51; West Virginia $18.94; North Carolina $10.24; South Carolina $12.18. The per capita subscription for the whole Fifth District was $20.26.

Maryland also lead in the number of subscribers to the third loan. Against its total of 253,916 was the District of Columbia 135,824; Virginia 173,787; West Virginia 125,344; North Carolina 81,582; South Carolina 87,905, making a total of 858,358. The percentage of the population of the Fifth District subscribing to the loan was 9.34.

Important Notice

Due to the fact that the Marylander and Herald has not raised its subscription price, the tremendous increase in cost of production notwithstanding, it is not possible for us to keep up our series of bills to subscribers, as the postage would wipe out what little profit there is in the subscription list. SHARE OUR SUGAR WITH THE ALLIES

British Get Two Pounds a Month. French Pound and Half, Italians One Pound.

GERMAN SUPPLY PLENTIFUL.

All Nations Permit Use of Sweetening for Home Preserving Purposes.

America's new sugar ration of two pounds a month per person is equitable when compared with the sugar ration enforced by rigid governmental order in England, France and Italy, nations with which we are sharing sugar.

Each Allied nation—in the matter of sugar consumption—is sharing on nearest possible equal terms the hardships imposed by greatly altered conditions in the world sugar situation.

Formerly classed as a luxury, sugar is now a war time essential. The fair and just division of this essential is in the hands of the various Allied food controllers.

The United States Food Administration has asked this nation to observe a voluntary sugar ration of two pounds per person a month.

In the other countries at war with Germany sugar is one of the scarce articles on every menu—whether in the households of both rich and poor, or in the hotels.

England today has a sugar ration of two pounds per month per person. In France the ration is a pound and a half and in Italy it is one pound a month. And the prices in allied countries are from two to three times as high as in America.

If you go to a hotel in England or France these days and order tea or coffee they serve absolutely no sugar with it. If you want sugar you must bring it with you.

In England it is allowable to use one-seventh of an ounce of sugar in the preparation of each luncheon. In France many persons carry little saccharine tablets about with them for use in hotels and in England rich and poor must take their sugar with them if they wish to have sweetened tea while visiting friends.

Before the war started France had 625,000 acres devoted to sugar production. By 1917 the French sugar acreage had decreased to 180,000 acres. Today the French man or woman with a sugar card has no assurance whatever that he or she will be able to actually buy sugar. To buy it, one must first find it.

Italy Has "State Sugar."

Especially drastic regulations govern the use of sugar in Italy. Its manufacture, distribution and sale are closely controlled, and in part actually taken over by the state.

Saccharine is permitted to be sold and used as a substitute for sugar and the government manufactures a mixture of saccharine and sugar called "State Sugar," which is largely used.

German Sugar Ration Adequate.

Germany, before the war, produced a great surplus of sugar and exported large quantities. Today the Germans have virtually gone out of the export business, but have plenty of cheap sugar for home use.

Wholesale prices prevalent in the Allied nations, according to information received by the United States Food Administration are as follows: England, 10 cents a pound; France, 12 cents; Italy, 26 cents.

While these high prices are being paid abroad the American wholesale price is being held at 7½ cents.

Woman's Responsibility

That the war is bringing to women an hitherto unknown sense of responsibility was recently demonstrated by a bride whose wedding ceremony was performed in the Hostess House of the Young Women's Christian Association, at Camp Meade. She did not appear to be more than about sixteen years old, and her bridegroom was in the very early twenties. After the ceremony she prepared to go back to her home, for the next day the young husband started for France.

"Don't you wish you could go with him to France?" sympathetically asked Dr. Florence M. Dyer, the Hostess-Director of the House. The little bride paused a moment in deep thought, "No," she replied, "it wouldn't do. We women have to stay at home to keep things going."

SELLING ENGLAND'S LARDER.

The food situation in England is greatly improved within the last month or so, declare travelers just returned. Bacon may now be bought without a meat coupon, as may tripe and certain other kinds of offal. An enormous acreage of the fertile English farm lands is under cultivation this year, and the heavy crops would amaze the average American farmer. The wonderful success of the allotment system whereby householders on the outskirts of towns and big cities were given plots of land rent free or for a nominal rental on which to grow garden truck has resulted in a vast increase of these family vegetable plots this year.

England experienced her most trying time between the months of November and February. Those were the days when famine's ghastly face loomed near. But, thanks to the efforts of the British Food Controller, this terrible danger is done with forever. What with the food being grown in England and the vast stores accumulated from the United States, Great Britain could carry on and feed the fifty millions of population till next winter, even supposing that not another ship load of food reached her shores during that period of time. This allows America still further to concentrate her efforts upon feeding the other Allied countries as well as her own fast-growing army overseas.

Cure For Dysentery

"While I was in Ashland, Kansas, a gentleman overheard me speaking of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes William Whitelaw, of Des Moines, Iowa. "He told me in detail of what it had done for his family, but more especially his daughter who was lying at the point of death with a violent attack of dysentery, and had been given up by the family physician. Some of his neighbors advised him to give Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy, which he did, and fully believes that by doing so saved the life of his child. He stated that he had also used this remedy himself with equally gratifying results."

Governor Harrington Issues Call

In compliance with the request of Provost Marshal General Crowder, Governor Harrington has taken steps to assist the Government in the registration of the men to be registered under the so-called 18 to 45 draft bill now pending in Congress by issuing a proclamation calling upon all election officials throughout the State to volunteer their services for one day of the registration, and all owners or lessees of premises ordinarily used for election and registration purposes to give the Government the free use of such premises. It is believed that by having the regular election officials in charge it will be easy to enroll every man coming within the new draft age on one day.

Enormous Supplies For Army

The magnitude of purchases in foodstuffs made by the Government for use by the troops in cantonments in this country and in France is shown in statistics made public last week.

Since last September the Government has purchased through the Food Administration for the army 225,000,000 pounds of sugar and 75,000,000 cans of tomatoes.

The sugar purchased, according to a War Department statistical expert, would fill 3,345 sixty-foot box cars, which it would take six men working eight hours each day for five years to unload.

The cans containing the tomatoes, if placed end to end, the expert has figured, would form a line from the army on the Marne to Linda Vista, Cal.

Counties To Help In Campaign

The National War Council of the Young Women's Christian Association will inaugurate a campaign, about November 1st, to raise funds to carry on its work during the coming year. The Maryland Council of Defense, Women's Section, has been asked to recommend chairmen to take charge of the work in the counties. The campaign will not be under the direction of the Council of Defense and chairman will not be appointed by the Council's County Chairmen, but the County Committees are asked by the State Chairman, Mrs. Edward Shoemaker, to confer with Miss Florence Wilbur, campaign director for the State of Maryland, and give the Young Women's Christian Association all possible assistance in securing local chairmen.

Entrance Examinations for the Department of Engineering, as well as for the College of Arts and Sciences, will be held in Gilman Hall, Homewood, Monday to Thursday, September 16th to 19th, 1918, beginning at 9 a. m. each day.

Applications for Scholarships in the Department of Engineering, established under the provisions of the laws of Maryland, Chapter 90, 1912, will now be received. If there is more than one applicant for a particular scholarship, a competitive examination must be taken Friday, September 20th, 1918, beginning at 9 a. m. Appointments will be made soon after.

Each Legislative District of Baltimore City and each county of the State, with the exception of Howard and Worcester counties, will be entitled to one or more scholarships for the year 1918-1919, in addition to those which have already been assigned. In the two counties mentioned above, all the available scholarships have been awarded.

Under the provisions of the act of Assembly, the county and city scholarships in the Department of Engineering are awarded only to deserving students whose financial circumstances are such that they are unable to obtain an education in engineering unless free tuition be granted to them. The scholarships entitle the holder to free tuition, free use of text-books, and exemption from all regular fees. One of the scholarships in each county and each Legislative District of the city carries also the sum of $200. The expense of attendance for those who do not receive scholarships is not greater than at other Maryland institutions.

Scholarships may be awarded to graduates of Loyola College, St. John's College, Washington College, Western Maryland College, Maryland Agricultural College, Mt. St. Mary's College, Rock Hill College. (Two scholarships will be awarded "At Large.")

Applicants should address The Registrar, The Johns Hopkins University, for blank forms of application and for further information as to examinations, award of scholarships and courses of instruction. The sessions begin Tuesday, October 1st. 8-20

SWIFT & COMPANY U.S.A.

Packers' Profits Are Regulated

The public should understand that the profits of the packers have been limited by the Food Administration since November 1, 1917. For this purpose, the business of Swift & Company is now divided into three classes:

Class 1 includes such products as beef, pork, mutton, oleomargarine and others that are essentially animal products. Profits are limited to 9 per cent of the capital employed in these departments, (including surplus and borrowed money), or not to exceed two and a half cents on each dollar of sales.

Class 2 includes the soap, glue, fertilizer, and other departments more or less associated with the meat business. Many of these departments are in competition with outside businesses whose profits are not limited. Profits in this class are restricted to 15 per cent of the capital employed.

Class 3 includes outside investments, such as those in stock yards, and the operation of packing plants in foreign countries. Profits in this class are not limited.

Total profits for all departments together in 1918 will probably be between three and four per cent on an increased volume of sales.

The restrictions absolutely guarantee a reasonable relation between live stock prices and wholesale meat prices, because the packer's profit cannot possibly average more than a fraction of a cent per pound of product.

Since the profits on meat (Class 1) are running only about 2 cents on each dollar of sales, we have to depend on the profits from soap, glue, fertilizer (Class 2, also limited) and other departments, (Class 3) to obtain reasonable earnings on capital.

Swift & Company is conducting its business so as to come within these limitations.
